The Polish Vote In the U.S.A.

When the President of the United States last week had completed his Saturday appearance at Denver, leaving his more extreme admirers in the "sent" condition similar to that Mr. Elvis Presley does for their teenage sons and daughters, the Columbine and the press planes were loaded up.

There then was a wait. After a while occupants of the press plane were called out to receive a presidential statement via Mr. James Hagerty, the press secretary.

The President, said Mr. Hagerty, had been in telephone touch with Secretary of State Dulles about the Polish situation. Mr. Hagerty then read a statement wishing the Poles all possible good luck.

After time had been given wire service reporters to place this priceless bit of prose on the wires, we again loaded up and departed.

Mr. Edward Tellow of the London Daily Telegraph was observed to be reading and re-reading this statement. At last he was moved to ask why everything had been delayed for such a piece of drivel.

An Explanation

He promptly had explained to him the fact that in Michigan and Chicago in particular, and in other smaller communities, there is a substantial Polish vote. There is an especially hard-fought battle in Detroit's teeming districts. The Polish vote has been Democratic and this year the GOP has a Polish descent candidate for governor. A mighty effort is being made there to defeat Gov. Wrentham (Soppy) Williams by taking from him the Polish and Negro votes. Hence, the decision to hold up the Denver departure so that a ringing commendation of Polish liberty from the President be issued in time to catch all the Sunday newspapers and be tied in with the story of the Polish Communists' attempt to become Tito-style Communists rather than Moscow types.

The agony of Poland is almost a continual pain to be read on the printed pages recording centuries of history. Her people are scattered in many lands.

Poland was, and is, a piece of strategic geography for the Russians. Stalin saw what could happen if he permitted the satellite nations under Red rule to have autonomy, to have Communist governments with a veto over Moscow directives. They might make deals with Western nations. They might become an Achilles heel for Russia. The broad Polish plains are excellent for tanks.

Now Defiance

It was he who established the Communist principle that all Communist parties everywhere owed first allegiance to Russia and the Kremlin.

Tito was the first to defy that principle.

Now Poland has done so. Hungary will certainly be next. The Russians, with their vast empire and tremendous armed strength, are now confronted with the problems of colonialism in Communist guise. They have gleefully exploited the problems of Great Britain and France whose colonies and protectorates in Africa were seeking autonomy, or "independence."

Now, the chicken of independence has come home to roost. The Communists who donned the robes left by the dead Stalin (perhaps murdered), denounced him as a murderer and an exploiter of Communist peoples.

This the satellites knew even better than the people of Russia. They knew, too, the products of their fields and factories had been taken to lift the standard of life in Russia, while their own had declined.

And the feeling of a people for the land of their birth and its history is not easily eradicated, though it may be eroded. The Russians, having begun the downgrading of Stalin, cannot halt it. They cannot throw troops into Poland or Hungary without bringing on further resistance.

And, most important to their position in Europe is East Germany. They cannot move troops from there without fear of a peoples' uprising. Nikita Khrushchev may have to go. But the problem will not depart with him. Once opened, the Pandora's box may not be easily closed.

Ike Terms Adlai H-Ban An 'Illusion'

Answers Rival Point-by-Point

By EDWIN L. DALE JR.
(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—President Eisenhower today termed an "illusion" the argument of Adlai Stevenson that a ban on testing of hydrogen bombs would lead to progress toward peace and a lessening of the threat of nuclear war.

The President issued a point-by-point rebuttal of the main arguments used by Stevenson to back his proposal for an international agreement, without inspection, to ban H-bomb tests. Such a plan, the President said, would bring "peril," not progress.

"There is nothing in postwar history," the President said, "to justify the belief that we should—or that we could even dare—accept anything less than sound safeguards and controls for any disarmament arrangements."

MAJOR POINTS

There were the major points made by the President in rebuttal to Stevenson's detailed presentation of his case eight days ago:

1. The present ability of the U.S. to deter aggression "could be lost if we failed to hold our superiority" in nuclear weapons. Stevenson had argued that the H-bomb is "already so powerful that a single bomb could destroy the largest city in the world."

2. An agreed test ban "cannot be regarded as automatically self-enforcing on the unverified assumption that such tests can be instantly and surely detected." The President said it is impossible, in view of the huge land mass of the Soviet, to have "positive assurance of such detection, except in the case of the largest weapons."

3. The continuance of the present rate of H-bomb testing—by the most sober and responsible scientific judgment—does not imperil the health of humanity. The President included in this judgment the fallout of radioactive strontium, called strontium 90, specifically mentioned by Stevenson.

Stevenson had said, "These

NEW YORK, Oct. 23—Adlai Stevenson raised tonight the question of whether the nation might "safely" entrust fateful decisions like that of losing the hydrogen bomb to the Republican Party leadership and to Vice President Nixon.

Stevenson returned to the hydrogen bomb debate with new force in an address at a rally in Madison Square Garden. The speech was carried to the nation by television.

He challenged President Eisenhower's leadership in the whole sphere of foreign affairs and advanced important proposals of his own, affecting Poland and Israel.

MISS AMERICA FLASHES WINNING SMILE

UNRUFFLED BEAUTY

Miss America Calm In Hurly-Burly Here

By CHARLES SOKPIN

Miss America of 1957, a calm in a sea of royal upheaval, arrived in Atlanta Tuesday night.

Miss Marion Ann McKnight, a 19-year-old blonde from Manning, S.C., took the hurly-burly with enough grace to make the House of Windsor jealous.

Stared at, smiled at and sometimes gaped at, she handled press agents, radio, television and newspapermen with tact and charm. She conducted three interviews in rapid succession. Hovering in the background, as she sat in a chair with an armful of roses, were her traveling companions, five tall, quietly dressed gentlemen from the commercial world, and television crews who were proceeding to spread wires through her hotel suite.

The photographers were given the first chance. "Smile," they said. She smiled. "A little bit over this way," they said. She moved.

Since Poland's current upheaval began, however, the State Department has been studying the possibility of supplying financial aid to the Poles. One of the sticky points involved has been whether this country should make an offer or wait for a request from Warsaw.

The President's statement tonight, phrased in the vague, broad language of a political speech, did not indicate whether a firm decision has been made at the White House. It was, however, susceptible to the interpretation that the President is prepared to act favorably if the Poles so request.

The President said the United States has a "mission as the champion of human freedom" to convey "the inspiration of freedom" to the "oppressed" of the satellite nations.

One phase of this "mission," he said, is "to help those freedom-loving peoples who need and want and can profitably use our aid that they may advance in their ability for self-support and may add strength to the security and peace of the free world."

This came in the context of a passage in which the President

Stevenson's indictment of Eisenhower with respect to the handling of the hydrogen bomb was slashing. He charged the President with trying to "close

Russia Yields To Poland; Troops Go

By COLIN FROST

WARSAW, Oct. 23 (U)—Nikita Khrushchev has lifted the Soviet military pressure from rebellious Poland and accepted most of the new Polish socialism-with-freedom policy, reliable sources reported tonight.

The sources said Soviet troop concentrations built up in central Poland during the crisis are dispersing. A Russian naval squadron sighted off Poland's Baltic coast has withdrawn.

CALL FROM KREMLIN

An authoritative source said Polish-Soviet relations improved dramatically this afternoon with a telephone call from the Kremlin to Wladyslaw Gomulka, new first secretary of the Polish Communist party.

The caller was Soviet Communist party boss Khrushchev and he was making a complete climb-down, the informant said. He gave this version:

Khrushchev told Gomulka that with some slight reservations he accepted the new Polish Socialist policy. He apologized for an attack by Pravda, the Soviet Communist organ, on the Polish press. The Pravda attack was one cause of ill-feeling.

PRAVDA RETRACTION

Khrushchev said that Pravda within the next day or so will print a virtual retraction. This would take the form of reprinting excerpts from Polish newspaper articles denouncing Pravda's attack as "clumsy interference."

Two of the letters, on Republican committee stationery, solicited contributions to the GOP fund-raising dinner here Thursday night when Postmaster General Arthur Summerfield will speak. The third letter sought aid for the congressional campaign of GOP candidate Randolph Thow-er in the Fifth District.

Hamilton called the letters a "direct violation" of the Hatch Act, which prohibits political activity by federal employees, but he would not disclose the names of the persons to whom these letters were sent.

"My information is that the receipt of these letters by federal employees was pretty general," Hamilton said. "I think this is serious enough that it ought to be brought to public attention."

TO STATE OFFICIALS
"As state finance chairman of the drive for Democratic funds, I have adhered to the policy of no solicitation of public employees," Hamilton said he has written letters to every elected state official but added that "they are not under the Hatch Act."

The Democratic finance chairman said he would send copies of the Republican letters to Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.), chairman of the senatorial committee charged with investigating campaign funds, "for whatever action he deems proper."

Hamilton said that "it's not

The remarks which Powell retracted involved a White House conference with Eisenhower on Oct. 11—a meeting from which Powell emerged to endorse the President for a second term.

Four days later Powell spoke of the meeting in an address to an Eisenhower rally in Harlem, the House member's home district.

Powell's speech included this account of an exchange with Eisenhower on the subject of desegregation. He said he asked Eisenhower:

"Mr. President, in the event that a school district refused to obey that decision of the federal court what do you advocate?"

He quoted Eisenhower as having replied:

GOPs Deny Violations In Soliciting Georgians

Georgia Republican leaders Tuesday denied any violations of the Hatch Act and scoffed at Democratic charges that GOP officials are breaking the law in soliciting campaign funds from federal workers.

State Treasurer George B. Hamilton, Democratic finance chairman for Georgia, hurled the accusations and displayed photographic copies of three letters signed by W. B. Shartzer, state GOP chairman, and sent to federal employees.

Texas Bars NAACP for Seeking Suits

TYLER, Tex., Oct. 23 (UP)—District Judge Otis T. Dunagan outlawed the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Texas late today on charges of violating the state's corporation laws and soliciting desegregation lawsuits.

Specifically, at the request of Atty. Gen. John Ben Shepperd, and after hearing an estimated 1,225,000 words of testimony in a hearing that began five weeks ago, he issued a temporary injunction against the NAACP.

The injunction forbids the NAACP to operate in Texas until a full-dress trial of Shepperd's case can be held and Judge Dunagan can decide whether to make his injunction permanent or abolish it. The NAACP will appeal.

In essence, Shepperd accused the NAACP of going out and finding Negro students and talking them into filing desegregation suits, rather than the other way round.

Shepperd also accused the NAACP, a New York corporation, of violating the state's corporation laws, in that, he said, it meddled in politics, collected money, which it sent out of the state, and did no benevolent or charitable work.

Thurgood Marshall, special counsel for the NAACP, argued that if the NAACP violates Texas law by profit making, "so have the Girl Scouts in the sale of cookies."

Powell Backtracks, Says President Did Not Favor Jail for Nonmixers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (U)—Rep. Powell (D-NY) today retracted, in a statement released by the White House, his report that President Eisenhower told him he favors jailing anyone who disobeys court orders to desegregate schools.

The Negro lawmaker said Eisenhower "did not make the remarks... which I attributed to him."

Powell's explanation was that he had confused in his own mind what was said in his interview with Eisenhower and an earlier news conference statement by the President on the enforcement of school integration.

Press secretary James C. Hagerty read Powell's statement to newsmen. Hagerty said Powell

Police Fire In Night-Long Street Fights

VIENNA, Austria, Wednesday, Oct. 24 (U)—Budapest radio said Communist authorities were still trying to quell riotous demonstrations by "rebellious elements" in the Hungarian capital at 6 a.m. Budapest time today.

The radio broadcast a special announcement warning the population not to go out into the streets until 9 a.m. because "operations against rebellious elements are still going on."

Previously the Budapest radio had announced that all public assembly in the capital had been forbidden "until order is re-established."

INTO MORNING

Apparently anti-Soviet demonstrations by tens of thousands of Hungarians that began last night had spilled over into the early hours of the morning.

Dispatches from Budapest last night said secret police had fired into a crowd near Budapest's station and a witness said one man was killed.

The crowd had pushed into Stalin Square shouting "Russkies (Russians) go home" and "Down with Geroe." Hungary's Communist party chief.

HAUL DOWN STAR

There was no telephone communication with the Budapest capital, where the crowds tried in vain to pull down a 26-foot statue of Stalin. They did manage to mutilate the statue and haul down a huge Red star on top of a trade union building facing the statue.

Budapest radio announced that armed demonstrators had attacked police and public buildings in the capital.

Communist authorities were taking stern measures to cope with the violence.

They blamed the violence on "Fascist reactionary elements" and said, "Until order is re-established all assembly and gathering of groups is forbidden."

This was decreed by the Hungarian Cabinet. The demonstration came after Ernoe Geroe, successor to Matyas Rakosi as chief of the Hungarian Communist party, made a surprise broadcast calling lies any rumors that Hungary wants to loosen its ties with the Soviet Union.

Geroe had just returned from talks with President Tito in Yugoslavia where the parties of the two nations pledged noninterference.

Nations Vote Peace Atom Constitution

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 23 (AP)—The International Atomic Energy Conference today adopted unanimously a statute for a world agency for peace agency with headquarters in Vienna.

In a closing statement to the 22 nations participating in the conference, U.S. Ambassador James J. Wadsworth said "we have done something here that makes it more likely that we and our children will live out our lives in peace."

The unanimous vote climaxed a month of concentrated debate and nearly two years of negotiation begun after President Eisenhower suggested the creation of a world agency for peace in December 1952.

But while delegates voiced hopes for the future, they listened intently for an indication from the major atomic powers of their enthusiasm for the final statute. Contributions of fissionable material on which the agency depends are entirely voluntary.

Soviet Ambassador Georgi N. Zarubin said "the success of this conference strengthens our belief that the agency set up will operate properly and smoothly and live up to the hopes of those who created it."

Britain's Sir Alec Randall, speaking also for Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa, said:

"In the spirit of cooperation shown here, we unreservedly welcome the establishment of the agency, and we shall do all in our power to make it a success."

Adlai's Plan Could Pave Way To a Munich, Nixon Implies

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR
(Copyright 1954 by The New York Times Co.)

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 23—Vice President Nixon implied tonight that Adlai Stevenson's proposals for halting hydrogen bomb tests and ending the military draft could pave the road to another Munich.

"A vote for Stevenson is a vote for weakness, indecision, and inexperience which could lead to war," he told a Republican rally to climax another day of whistle-stopping from his campaign train.

HARSHER WORDS

All day long, as he rolled through industrial areas and Big Ten football country, he pointed up the threat of communism and pleaded with voters to keep the "All-American quarterback," President Eisenhower, in the game to assure victory and peace.

But tonight he unfurled harsher words in a renewal of his slashing attacks on Stevenson's stated position to seek a world pact with the Soviet to end H-bomb tests.

He likened Stevenson's "good intentions" to those of Sir Neville Chamberlain "when he made concessions" to Adolf Hitler at Munich in 1938 and to those of Dean Acheson, secretary of state under former President Truman, "when he implied that we would not defend Korea" early in 1950.

H-BOMB PROPOSALS

He accused Stevenson of "allowing the impression to gain world-wide circulation that those merchants of misery," Soviet Premier Bulganin and Nikita S. Khrushchev, were "more dedicated to peace than President Eisenhower."

He linked the Stevenson and Bulganin proposals by posing and answering his own questions of how the United States could lose its superiority in atomic weapons. His answer was:

"By accepting the kind of agreement which both Stevenson and Bulganin have proposed independently."

INSPECTION PLAN

"If we were to agree to the Stevenson plan for stopping nuclear tests," he said "without insisting on the Eisenhower plan for (mutual) inspection (of arms) to guarantee that the agreement would be kept, we would be playing right in the Communists' hands, as an analysis of Bulganin's statement so clearly shows."

Nixon moved into Indiana after finding, as he told his final Michigan train-side audience at Niles, that Wolverine State Republicans were more united and confident this year than 1954 when Democrats picked up a House seat.

He left Flint this morning at 8:30 a.m. after a night of sleep aboard his "Dick Nixon Special" train. Chugging through southwest Michigan, he also stopped at Lansing, Battle Creek and Kalamazoo to wind up two days in the state and his third trip of the campaign to win the state's 20 electoral votes.

Estes Says Alliances Crack as Ike Brags

Sees Global Facts of Life Ignored by Dulles Policies

MASON CITY, Iowa, Oct. 23 (AP)—Sen. Estes Kefauver charged tonight that U.S. alliances are "falling apart at the seams" while the Eisenhower administration brags about international accomplishments.

The Democratic vice presidential candidate, turning from the farm issue to foreign relations as he stumped the corn belt, said the Eisenhower administration "has refused to look any of the facts of international life squarely in the face."

"Either that," he said, "or it has been guilty of attempting to perpetrate a monstrous fraud upon our people."

"I prefer to think that President Eisenhower and Mr. Dulles have been guilty only of stubborn refusal to remove their rose-tinted glasses," Kefauver said in a speech prepared for delivery before a rally at the high school fieldhouse here.

"I just wish Mr. Eisenhower would name one area in the world in which the prestige of the United States has been maintained in the past four years," he said.

Kefauver ticked off a list of the world's trouble spots including Cyprus, Suez, Kashmir, Burma, Formosa, Korea and Algeria.

where he said war is being waged or violence could erupt at any time.

"The Eisenhower administration has been so busy bragging about its accomplishments, many of which are in the realm of fancy," Kefauver said, "that it has failed to acknowledge that the alliances upon which our security rests are falling apart at the seams."

Earlier, Kefauver hammered away at the hot farm issue in Waterloo.

In a speech before an AFL-CIO and National Farmers' Organization meeting at the Waterloo fairgrounds, Kefauver charged that the administration was spending soil bank money in states where the Republicans are in the most serious political trouble.

"The soil bank is being cut and trimmed to fit the political needs of the Eisenhower administration in this election," he said.

"Very little of the money is going to states that are considered sure to go Democratic," Kefauver said.

United Nations Is World's Last Hope

Today is United Nations Day. Eleven years ago the U.N. Charter came into being. It was born on a note of hope that peace might be preserved in the world through united action and that in acting together, nation with nation, good might come to all.

In practice the United Nations has fallen short of its goals. But in considering that it is only a decade and one year old, its achievements are far greater than might have been expected at the outset from the most hopeful.

The U.N. is not a supergovernment. It cannot enforce a settlement of problems. But it has provided a forum of neutrality in which both sides or all sides of international controversies have been heard and the force of international opinion has been brought to bear. How else can the world work toward peace?

Looking back over its record, it is obvious that in Korea and in many other less serious instances the United Nations has been able to do what the lamented League of Nations could not do. The latter was starved to death largely because this country rejected it.

Lately in the Middle East and in the Suez crisis, the U.N. has maintained at least a semblance of peace.

Through one agency or another, the organization has explored the problems of the world—economic, social and governmental. It has brought intelligence and some order into these problems to the end that distribution and production are being improved for the benefit of all.

There have been no miracles or no immediate answers. But the United Nations has become a center of intellectual and moral persuasion as a substitute for force. It has no governmental authority nor is its headquarters in New York a world capital by any means.

But over the past 11 years the world has seen an organization taking shape with the possibility of becoming stronger than armies or bombs—which can say with the backing of all peoples that mankind has the moral strength and the intellect to get along together and to overcome the self-destruction which is the alternative.

Georgia's Urban Areas Ask for a Better Deal

The Georgia Municipal Assn. is reorganizing in an effort to become a stronger force and have a more commanding voice in the affairs of the state.

The effort deserves every encouragement. Through the process of industrialization, Georgia has become an urban rather than a rural state and this trend is bound to continue.

Politically, however, the setup still is one of rural dominance and the municipalities of Georgia and their citizens suffer.

Meeting in Atlanta, directors of the association voted to increase the dues of member cities, an act that must be approved by two-thirds of the group's 228 members. The object of this is to give the association a larger operating budget and all that such a budget implies in the way of increased services and articulate explanations of the plight of municipalities.

With the flight from the farm to the payroll, Georgia's urban areas have become the chief sources of revenue for the state. Yet state kickbacks to these areas are very low, a factor that is one of the important causes of the squeeze on municipal finances. This situation can be remedied by the General Assembly, but not without an organization that inspires the respect of that body's members.

Mayor Frank Tigner of LaGrange has been head of the Georgia Municipal Assn. for the past year and a presiding officer who has taken his duties seriously. Credit for this incipient revolution for the benefit of the majority goes to him.

The evolution of postwar Georgia from a rural to an urban state has been almost entirely an economic one. These shifts of population and changes in the income and tax-gathering patterns have not been followed by new philosophies in the distribution of state largesse or revisions of the county unit system to allow growing urban areas a fair voice in the affairs of the state.

Perhaps the reorganized Georgia Municipal Assn. will spearhead a new day when Georgians once again share equally in the state's wealth and political affairs.

Purchasing Department Tightens Up Procedure

In the future, those doing business with the state must sign a statement that no employee or officers of the firm involved hold any state jobs.

This policy, announced by State Purchasing Supervisor Lawton Shaw, bolsters a year-old state law to the same effect. The Legislature passed the law to establish firmly a policy set forth by Gov. Griffin in an executive order.

Mr. Shaw's action came after the disclosure that two state employees had negotiated for business done by the state with a concrete culvert firm in Telfair County. Mr. Shaw said in this connection he was not aware of the fact that the bidders were on the state payroll.

Explaining the new move, Mr. Shaw added that he interpreted it to extend to boards and authorities, as well as old line state agencies; an interpretation the taxpayers will hail with joy if it extends to members of those boards and authorities as well as their employees.

Signing this pledge will be as hard for some people as joining Alcoholics Anonymous is for others. All Georgia hopes that the number of cures in the former case will equal that of the latter.

Democrats Should Be Worthy of the Name

Loyalty to political parties on the part of their members is an understandable thing. But no party should require blind adherence to the actions and decisions of its leaders when they are taken arbitrarily and without regard to those members.

Such situations exist in the Democratic Party in some counties in our own state. The people of Telfair County, for instance, under a county Democratic ruling, had to vote in a primary called in May, 1955. The general election does not come until this November when the primary nominees are to be ratified—a time lapse of more than a year.

Rebellious citizens, who say they are Democrats, protested the Telfair action and held their own primary last week under the label of the Late Primary Party.

These Telfair citizens have focused attention on a weakness of Democratic Party operations in Georgia. They also have called attention to a basic weakness of the one-party system in which those in office seize the opportunity of perpetuating themselves. No Democrat or member of any other party can deny that or that it is an evil.

Another evil in Georgia is the early registration deadline which contributes to the small voter participation in the state. The May 5 deadline in Georgia this year, for instance, kept many people from registering because there was little interest in politics prior to that date.

Georgia Democrats need to give some thought to these matters. There is no need for more than one primary and registration should be permitted at the last possible moment consistent with orderly conduct of elections.

Gov. Griffin said Monday he is supporting the regular Democratic nominees in Telfair County. He could say nothing else. But at the same time, he should have called attention to the meaning of the word Democrat and should have reminded his hearers that members of the party should be worthy of that designation.

Actions which deliberately restrict the democratic process are unworthy of any party.

Let Gwinnett Countians Settle Own Problems

The Gwinnett County School Board, exercising common sense and calmness in the face of extremist pressure, has retained a teacher accused of stating "unpopular racial views."

Her opponents are reported as planning an appeal to the state board.

Here we have a fine illustration of human nature in contradiction. Extremists constantly are demanding that outside agencies, including the federal government, stay out of local affairs and leave them to the people involved. But when they lose a case they immediately seek outside interference.

The Gwinnett County board has acted. It knows the case and the merits of it. Let the state stay out of it.

U. S. Navy's New Ship May Be Named Savannah

The Savannah Morning News has called upon the Navy to name its new nuclear-powered cruiser the U.S.S. Savannah.

The News recalls that other famous ships have borne that city's name, including the first vessel to use steam in the crossing of the Atlantic. The Navy's present Savannah, a light cruiser, is obsolete and slated for destruction.

As one of the nation's busiest and most historic ports, Savannah certainly deserves to have a Navy ship bearing its name at all times. That it should be this revolutionary new cruiser is particularly fitting in view of the equally revolutionary Savannah of 1819 and her epochal experiment with steam.

Republican Effort To Make Political Capital Out of Korean War Scored by Alto Citizen

Alto—I have read the editorial entitled "GOP Truth Squad Should Start Work." I agree 100 per cent. I don't think that the Republicans can claim credit for either peace or prosperity.

Harry Truman did the strong and right thing when he went to war in Korea. The free world worked together and stopped aggression that would probably have caused another world war if it had been allowed to go unchecked.

For President Eisenhower and the Republicans to come in now and make political capital out of this, I think is the most underhanded thing they could do. Stevenson was defeated for this very reason last time and may be defeated for the same reason again.

The Republicans just happened to come in when the Communists realized that they had been stopped and it was to their advantage to make peace.

I wonder if any right-thinking person believes that the Democrats didn't want peace and would not have made peace on the right terms.

As far as prosperity is concerned, it is a trend over the entire world. All of the countries in Europe are prosperous—prosperous as we are here—under the threat of inflation. I wonder if the Republicans would like to take credit for that, too.

Duty's Call and Elk's Bugle Sound Clear to Governors

In the Denver Post

Sam Pirke, semi-retired sportsman and rockingchair general, dropped by the other night to appraise the world situation. Sighting down the barrel of his nose, Sam took dead aim on some parched peanuts on the coffee table, scooped up a few medium-rare goobers and chomped awhile before announcing the text for the evening.

"I've been notice'n that governors has been takin' an active personal interest in the national defense," Sam opined.

"How's that, Sam?" I asked, on cue.

"Well, take the governor of Wyoming. Every year he invites other governors to brush up on their marksmanship in what they call a one-shot antelope hunt. It's real comfortin' to know that in case Colorado or Wyoming is invaded, we got governors that can hold off the antelope.

"Some of them governors are even volunteering for foreign service. Just the other day I was readin' about Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia doin' a hitch up in Idaho.

"Marvin is the commander in chief of the Georgia National Guard in addition to servin' as governor, you know. Well, him and his general staff decided to fly up to Idaho and get a few ideas on the defense setup of the United troops.

"So they hopped off in a C-47. It just so happened that the elk hunting season set in while they was up there in Idaho on military maneuvers.

"There was nothing for them to do but shoot a few elk that got in the line of fire whilst they was on the rifle range."

Talmadge Explains Photo of Hurt Dog

Atlanta—In reply to the question asked recently by Miss Woods, I would like to relate the circumstances under which my picture happened to be taken while freeing a stray dog which became trapped in one of the fences on my farm.

The day the photograph was taken, Associated Press Photographer Horace Cort of the Atlanta Bureau, came to Lovejoy on assignment to take some informal pictures of my family and me to illustrate an article to be distributed by Associated Press News-features. Horace wanted some pictures of me inspecting the farm, so we went outside.

While taking a shot of the pony barn, we heard a dog howling as if in pain. Following the sound of the yelp we found the animal caught in the fence, apparently having hung there for several days. I immediately began untangling the fence to free the dog and as I did, Horace, as he told me later, snapped the picture.

Not more than 30 seconds elapsed between the time we found the dog and I freed her. I was not even aware that a picture had been taken until it appeared in print.

As a dog owner and fancier myself, I would like to assure Miss Woods that I would not let any animal suffer for any reason if it were within my power to do anything to prevent it.

Villanow Was Vital Crossing

The bronze marker C. E. Gregory and the Georgia Historical Commission have put up says something like this: Villanow—an ante-bellum crossroads settlement—the name of which comes from Jane Porter's novel "Thaddeus of Warsaw" . . .

Not many of Georgia's three and a half million residents have been in Villanow. It's still a crossroads settlement, site of Otis Poarch's country store and a sign which advertises "East Armuchee Valley Honey."

But on the maps the engineers made for Sherman's army, the name Villanow stands out.

In May 1864 the settlement in the southeast corner of Walker County in northwest Georgia was a crossroads of history.

Gen. Joe E. Johnston had his Confederates entrenched at Mill Creek Gap northwest of Dalton, where the highway, the railroad and the creek, then and now, pass through the rugged backbone of a mountain called Rocky Face.

The Federals pushed down from Ringgold, tested the position and found it tight. Sherman called for an end run. There was a back door to Rocky Face. It was by Villanow through a narrow defile aptly named Snake Creek Gap.

The Federal commander called the play. It worked. The Confederate line fell back to Resaca.

A long time ago, when I was stationed at Kennesaw Mountain National Battlefield Park as historian, we used to carry CCC guides along the Atlanta Campaign route, as part of a training program.

One day before Pearl Harbor one of such expeditions we went from Mill Creek Gap to pick up the Federal trail at Snake Creek Gap. In the store at the crossroads, I asked, "Where is Villanow?"

"Mister," the storekeeper said, "you're standing in it right now."

I guess the settlement hasn't changed too much since '64. I know it hasn't since 1941.

The road east through Snake Creek Gap is still unpaved. Folks who want to go from Calhoun to Summerville and Trion go through Rome, though Calhoun is as close to the two cities to the west as it is to Rome. That is, it's as close as the crow flies. But crows are not conditioned to concrete. There is no paved road across the mountains between Gordon and Chatsworth counties.

Until the weekend, I had never been west from Villanow. The schedule called for Saturday night in Dalton and Sunday afternoon in Summerville.

It's a beautiful drive through the gap in Rocky Face, across East Armuchee Valley and over Ship's Gap in Taylor's Ridge.

If you have taken to the open road to see the brilliant show called Fall Foliage, this weekend still won't be too late.

Fiery Autumn Sets The World Aflame

The rains may have started the leaf fall and the show may be over soon, but last weekend the pagan autumn stages was the finest seen in the highlands in many a year. In the memory of the oldest inhabitants the maples and the hickories, the sumac and the sourwood have never blazed more brightly than they have this fall and for another two weeks at least, barring unseasonable cold and wind, the color ought to be at its peak.

It's worth traveling far to see. We started out on Friday and drove 200 miles up through Ellijay and Blue Ridge to Murphy, through the deep Nantahala Gorge and on to Cherokee and Maggie Valley, ending up at sunset at Tom Alexander's ranch, a mile high and above the clouds.

Every mile from Ellijay on the color was overwhelming. You saw it below you as you traveled the ridge tops; above you in splendor, rising in a thousand shades of red, yellow and purple to the skyline as you threaded through the valleys.

It was near and it was far; color in masses and bright trees standing alone in old fields, blazing like the Burning Bush of Moses' time.

You remembered vistas, like the sweep of Socco Valley—seen from the heights, with the great hills towering above, ablaze with color and the patches of far green pastures and the little houses with bright aluminum rooftops and the cattle grazing.

And you remembered single trees, like the maple in the churchyard at Bryson City, that takes the breath away. You come around a

Answers to Prayer Take Many Forms

Jesus said, "And whatsoever ye shall ask in My name, that will I do" (John 14:13). In explanation, we must remember four facts: (1) Frequently God already has put within our reach the "whatsoever." There was a boy who asked God to give him a good mark on his examination the next day. He prayed earnestly but he failed the exam.

He lost his faith and said bitterly the promises of God were no good. The next year he decided he did not need God, that he could get along by himself.

So he repeated the course, studied hard and passed the exam. It took that boy some years to realize that God had answered his prayer even before he prayed it. God had given him the mental ability to learn the course and pass the exam, but the first year he hadn't used God's answer.

(2) God is wiser than we and He has the power to distinguish between what we really want and what we think we want at the moment.

One summer I rode with the junk man every day. He had a fine horse and I had great fun driving. When September came I told my father I wanted to work always with the junk man and did not want to go back to school.

Suppose my father had said, "All right, since you have decided what you want, you may have it."

Being wiser, he could distinguish between my immediate whims and the real desires of my heart. He refused my whim but, as Tagore said, "Thou didst save me by Thy hard refusals."

(3) God is concerned with all

More To Be Heard On H-Bomb Issue

WASHINGTON—When Russia got into the, the issue of ending H-bomb tests became a major one in the presidential campaign. We may expect to hear much about it in the few days before the election, and so angrily and noisily that it may block diplomatic roads to Russia which we have worked so long to open up.

For such a result, if it occurs, President Eisenhower must share some responsibility. Needlessly hasty and impetuous was his reply to Soviet Premier Bulganin's letter to him in which the Russian leader endorsed Stevenson's proposal to try to get a mutual agreement to stop H-bomb tests.

The rapprochement which President Eisenhower himself had been able to establish previously with Premier Bulganin for negotiation of our differences is too important. Too important, indeed, to be risked for the sake of a political issue in a campaign that will be over in two weeks.

His mounting pique at Stevenson was manifest to those who accompanied him on his recent Pacific Coast cavalcade.

A few days before he bluntly rejected the Stevenson proposal and said that would be his "last word" on the subject. But last week, on the Pacific Coast, he changed his mind. He joined the issue indirectly by instructing Secretary of State Dulles, Secretary of Defense Wilson and Adm. Strauss, Atomic Energy Commission chairman, to prepare a formal reply to the Democratic presidential candidate.

An interesting development in the presidential campaign is the way the attitude of the two parties has become reversed by words and acts of the heads of our two parties.

The President made the first direct and open overtures to Russia through the "summit" conference. And some time after that the administration made plans to reduce our defense expenditures. This was not chiefly because of the better relations which we thought for a time had come out of Geneva, but because of new-style defense based about new weapons.

Democrats were skeptical of the "summit" conference which provided no concrete results. They were also critical of defense policy on the ground that we were cutting too deeply.

Now Stevenson comes along to try to work out with Russia an agreement on the H-bomb, first by ending tests, whose fallout are so dangerous to health and survival of the human race, as a prelude to general disarmament and outlaw of atomic weapons.

He is not only attacked, but constantly misrepresented—and by the President himself, among others. His aim is an international agreement just as has been the President's.

Stevenson's expressed hope that at some future time the draft might be eliminated also is under severe attack. It fits in, however, with the administration's own new style—more mobile defense requiring less but more skilled manpower.

We have heard the President explain this new-type defense repeatedly at news conferences in recent months. The only difference is that Stevenson starts at one of the end-results, less manpower, instead of with weapons. This he does because this frankly makes a better political issue, since it affects people who vote as people.

Farm Income Is Above '55 Despite Lower Prices

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (UP)—The Agriculture Department reported today that over-all farm income topped 1955 levels by nearly two per cent in the first nine months of this year despite generally lower farm prices.

It said a prospective "record high" farm yield this year enabled farmers to step up sales four per cent in the period ended September 30. This more than offset a two per cent decline in agricultural prices.

The department reported in its monthly "demand and price" report that farmers made about 20.2 billion dollars in sales in the January-September period, including 11.8 billion dollars worth of livestock and livestock products and 8.4 billion dollars worth of crops.

The report indicated that this situation is expected to continue for the rest of the year. "Total output of farm products this year may well be a record high," the department said. "Crop output, according to Oct. 1 estimates, is close to the 1955 record despite drought in the Great Plains. Production of meat animals, milk, poultry, and eggs continues to exceed year ago levels."

Receipts from livestock and products in the first nine months of 1956 ran slightly ahead of last year. Higher average milk and egg prices in the first half of 1956 more than offset lower hog prices.

Income from crops was three per cent above the comparable 1955 period. This was due mostly to larger receipts from vegetables and fruits, which offset smaller tobacco and soybean receipts.

The department attributed the general expansion in economic increase in farm marketings to a activity.

Mansfield in Court

No Kitchen Slave, Jayne Gets Divorce

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 23 (UP)—Buxom film star Jayne Mansfield won a divorce today from public relations man Paul Mansfield on testimony he wanted to keep her in the kitchen "from 5 a.m. to 5 p.m."

The 23-year-old beauty was granted the decree by Superior Judge Samuel R. Blake after Mansfield failed to press a cross-complaint in which he charged his wife was not a fit person to have custody of their daughter, Jayne Marie, 5.

Miss Mansfield said that her husband's attitude made her so nervous that it caused her to lose weight. She said Mansfield objected to her working but finally she was forced to "because my husband did not make enough to pay household bills and I had to work for bread and butter money."

CARRIES MINK COAT

"He believed a woman's place was in the home," the actress testified in a soft voice, "and most especially in the kitchen from 5 a.m. to 5 p.m."

She came to court from a movie studio wearing a high-necked jersey suit that covered but did not hide her charms. She also carried a full-length mink coat.

Mansfield had claimed in his counter-suit that his wife was not fit to rear their daughter because of her scantily-clad poses for magazines. But she pointed out that she had to do the posing "to get milk and bread for the baby."

MARRIED IN 1950

Miss Mansfield achieved stardom on the Broadway stage in "Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?"

She and Mansfield were married in Fort Worth, Tex., May 6, 1950, and went through several separations. He formerly was a Dallas, Tex., publicity man, editor of a Los Angeles neighborhood newspaper and currently is a Washington, D. C., publicist for a soft drink firm.

The judge awarded Miss Mansfield $1 a year token alimony for two years and $20 a week support for their child as well as approving an agreement under which she received their $25,000 home and one of two cars.

30-City Group To Oppose Gas Firm's Serving Floyd

By BRUCE GALPHIN

Some 30 cities in the Georgia Municipal Assn. Tuesday formed a group to represent the mutual interests of cities having their own natural gas distribution systems.

Association President Frank Tigner, mayor of LaGrange, was named temporary chairman of the group.

Probably the first activity of the new committee, Tigner said, will be to oppose the application of the Atlanta Gas Light Co. to extend service into Floyd County.

The Georgia Public Service Commission will hold a hearing on the gas company's application on Nov. 14.

A longer-range goal of the committee will be to provide full-time representation of member cities before the Federal Power Commission in Washington, Tigner said.

Tigner predicted Georgia gas-distributing cities will face numerous rate-hike requests in Washington in the next few months. If the cities act separately, attorneys' costs will be almost overwhelming, he said.

Many of the mayors and city representatives at the meeting also expressed concern over a new state law which requires city gas distributing systems to obtain permission from the PSC to serve areas outside their counties.

Tigner and others said they were not aware of the new law until a few days ago. The chairman explained that many cities at present serve areas outside their respective county lines.

These cities will have to obtain new permission to continue the service, he added.

Mayor E. C. Pesterfield of Summerville said his city already was planning to file as intervenor against the Atlanta Gas Light application.

Mayor Charles Cowan of Cartersville warned that most city distributors "cannot afford to lose any customers." He explained that Cartersville had had to go into Floyd County to hook up with natural gas lines. The city was planning to serve Floyd County areas.

Colors Are Calling You to Hurt Park

By MARJORY SMITH

IF YOU WANT TO SEE Hurt Park at its best, the time is now.

That's an official pronouncement from Mayor Hartsfield. Hizzoner would hate for any flower-loving Atlantan to miss the thousands of beautiful azaleas currently in full bloom there. White, yellow, bronze, purple—those shaggy blossoms have more colors than Hurt's famed fountain. "Mums are at their height this week, will soon begin fading."

LOCAL NEWSSTAND OPERATOR says its seven-to-one bet his customers won't buy the top magazine on a stack. "They'll thumb through that one," he reports, "but when they get ready to buy, they dig down into the stack for a fresh one." (A smart operator, this news retailer flips over his stacks occasionally to prevent wear and tear on that scorned top number and fool the public into buying it in spite of the general prejudice.)

News Agent Cooperated, Censors Say

The State Literature Commission, Georgia's censoring body, Tuesday made two contradictory recommendations.

The first recommendation, which must be made according to a ruling of the attorney general, asked that Sol. Gen. Paul Webb of Atlanta prosecute distributors of magazines which the commission has found to be obscene in previous hearings.

The second recommendation, that of the Rev. James P. Wesberry, the commission chairman, was that he "would personally ask Solicitor Webb to give every consideration to the Atlanta News Agency, distributor of magazines, for their excellent cooperation with us and because they have never failed to comply with any request of the commission."

AGENCY HEAD AT MEET

Harry Elson, owner and operator of the Atlanta News Agency, one of those cited, appeared before the board. He was introduced by Wesberry, who outlined the cooperation of the dealer with the board.

Elson said the confusion he is operating under is almost enough "to make me quit the business."

"I am no censor. I cannot physically read every one of the 2,700 different publications that go through my agency every month. And I wouldn't know what to consider obscene if I could," the dealer said. "I have tried to do everything the commission has said. But when a magazine comes out in January, is found to be obscene in the summer months, and then I face prosecution in the fall, I hardly know what steps to take."

WANTS U.S. COURT ACTION

Chairman Wesberry said that he had received no official notification of action filed by publishers in federal court here concerning the recommendations of the commission in regard to six magazines classed as obscene.

"I would certainly like to get into federal court on this matter. I think that such action would show the people of Georgia where right and decency are—in the hands of the servants of the people of Georgia as represented by this commission, or in the hands of the publishers of these magazines," Wesberry said.

The commission also had stated previously that it would ask D. Marshall Pollock, of the Western Judicial Circuit, and Andrew J. Ryan, of the Eastern Judicial Circuit, also to enter prosecution against dealers in obscene matter.

VICTIM OF CIRCUMSTANCES

Wesberry said Elson is a victim of circumstances, who, trying to do the right thing, was caught in the processes of confusing legislation.

"Mr. Elson is in the predicament of having to deal with each issue as it comes out, and this problem is insurmountable for one man. He has followed the recommendations of the board in every instance, and I know that he wants to do what is right for the reading public of Georgia," Wesberry said.

Arab Riots Assail French For Seizing Rebel Chiefs

8 Frenchmen Killed in Tunisia;
Mob Tries To Storm Embassy

TUNIS, TUNISIA, Oct. 23 (AP)—Moslems erupted in anti-European riots across Morocco and Tunisia today in fury over the French seizure of five Algerian nationalists. The Tunisian government suspended diplomatic relations with France in anger.

The five seized Algerians were en route to a "peace council" here with Tunisian leaders when they were seized by a ruse. A Tunisian government spokesman warned that the peace conference now "threatens to turn into a council of war."

Moslems stormed through the streets of Bizerte, Rabat and Casablanca in Morocco. A mob tried to storm the French embassy in Tunis, capital of Tunisia.

Nine persons, including eight Frenchmen and one Moroccan, were killed in a riot at Meknes Tunisia, officials announced.

A general strike paralyzed Tunis and other cities.

Almost 5,000 Moslems, some waving the green and white nationalist flag of Algeria, swarmed through the streets of Casablanca.

Government officials were irate.

"WE ARE FED UP"

An aide to the Sultan of Morocco said "we are completely fed up with France. France is lying to us and using treachery."

The five Algerian nationalists were seized Monday night when they took off in a French-leased airplane from Rabat, capital of Morocco, en route to Tunis for conferences with Tunisian officials.

The French talked the pilot into landing the plane at Algiers.

The Tunisian ambassador to France was recalled and diplomatic relations were suspended.

DEBATE IN U.N.

(In Paris, France said it would haul Egypt before the United Nations Security Council on charges of funneling arms to the Algerian rebels.

(Premier Guy Mollet declared that French warships would patrol the North African coast to track down arms shipments.

(The Afro-Asian bloc at the United Nations demanded that France immediately release the five nationalist leaders.)

No Progress Reported in Rail Talks

CHICAGO, Oct. 23 (AP)—Mediation continued today on disputes involving the nation's railroads and more than a dozen unions.

Leverett Edwards, chairman of the National (Railway) Mediation Board, said, however, no reports concerning progress of the discussions would be made.

In mediation are disputes affecting the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the Switchmen's Union of North America and a group of non-operating unions.

In cases of most unions, strike authorizations have been made. However, there was no indication of any impending strike.

tests, themselves, cause the human race unmeasured damage."

4. The U.S. could suffer a "serious military disadvantage" if the Soviet violated a test ban, even if the U.S. had continued its research and preparations. The President said that even if such a plan were "feasible," it requires "a year or more to organize and effect such tests as those conducted at our proving ground in the Pacific ocean."

Stevenson had said that if the Soviets violated an agreement, the U.S. could resume tests in a maximum of eight weeks. The President specifically denied this today.

The President did not address himself to the final Stevenson argument that a test ban would prevent other nations than the U.S., Britain and the Soviet Union from achieving H-bombs.

Today's document included a presidential statement, a "memorandum" by appropriate officials on various aspects of testing, and a long chronology of negotiations and policy statements on disarmament. These revealed, among other things, the following:

1. The fallout of radioactive strontium—often called the most dangerous fallout product—results from all nuclear tests, not just H-bomb tests. Strontium 90 is a product of fission, the President said, which is the basic process of atomic bombs. An end to H-bomb tests would not end the production of Strontium 90, he said.

2. Of all the tests carried on by the U.S. since 1944, "approximately 20 per cent have been of high-yield thermonuclear designs and 80 per cent of fission devices."

MAIL POUCH SHIPMENT

Detectives Find No Clues In Loss of 44,000 $1 Bills

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23 (AP)—Uncle Sam's sleuths still are without a clue as to what happened to 44,000 one dollar bills missing from a currency shipment to Memphis, Tenn.

The Secret Service said today the money was in a mail pouch, one of 22 pouches making up a shipment from the U.S. Treasurer to the Federal Reserve Bank at Memphis. It has been missing seven weeks.

The service said in a statement there is no evidence or information to show the missing pouch was stolen. On the other hand, it expressed belief that if the pouch was merely misdirected it would have turned up by now.

The actual investigation is in the hands of postal inspectors. The Secret Service said its role has been to make sure the shipment was made properly and to maintain liaison with postal inspectors.

Soviets Ask Bonn Ideas On Security

Non-Aggression Pact Suggested

By ARTHUR J. OLSEN

(Copyright 1956 by The New York Times Co.)
BONN, Oct. 23—The Soviet Union invited West Germany today to spell out specific proposals to insure the security of Eastern Europe against future aggression.

In a 3,000-word reply to a West German note delivered six weeks ago the Soviet government expressed particular interest in a suggested demilitarized zone in central Europe. It also asked whether West Germany is willing to conclude a non-aggression pact with Eastern European countries.

REJECT UNITY IDEAS

The long note coldly rejected Bonn's ideas on the re-unification of Germany and European security as containing "no constructive proposals whatsoever" and as being "unresponsive" to conditions in Europe. But it concluded with an invitation for further "exchange of opinion" between Bonn and Moscow.

The harsh accusing language of the Russian reply, reminiscent of the vocabulary employed in the Stalin era, contrasted sharply with the conciliatory tone of the West German note. In that memorandum Bonn asked for free elections on terms that would not upset the military balance between East and West.

CHANGE BAD FAITH

The Soviet reply charged the government of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of bad faith in calling for immediate steps to end the partition of Germany. It accused Bonn of building up an aggressive military force, of thirsting for atomic arms, of hindering international disarmament, and of casuistry in asking for the right of self-determination in East Germany.

The West Germans were told bluntly that the only possibility of achieving Germany's re-unification is by direct negotiation between Bonn and the Soviet-sponsored German Democratic Republic.

In Behalf of a Spitter

Any day now Jack Tighe may be named manager of the Detroit Tigers again. This little picking game became great journalistic sport last week while the new management waited to make a production of it, complete with cocktail party and passing trays of goodies.

There hasn't been a greater clinch since Sen-Sen, which was always a clinch to inform anybody within breathing reach that you had been up to no good. So the papers in Detroit took turns announcing inside exclusives that the next manager of the Tigers would be you-know who.

Bisher

He turned on his automobile radio. Halfway into town his conference collapsed. A newscaster informed him that a radio station in the chain of the new owner of one-eleventh of the Tigers had announced Bucky Harris' resignation.

The Tighe announcement was to be Spike's next effort at a press production.

Sandboxes for the Indoor Season

The Sporting News announced Tighe's appointment almost a week before the Tigers did, but they went through with it, complete with coaching staff and happy family pictures. Billy Hitchcock was called in from his hardware store in Opelika, Ala., Willis Hudlin from Mississippi and Don Lund from the suburbs, and they were all there when Tighe got his new assignment, which proves that a man who spits can get ahead in the world.

It was Ted Williams who set spitting back several decades last summer in an anti-press fury. Unsatisfactory as it is charged to be, spitting for accuracy was once a highly developed sport on the front porches of country stores and on the sidewalks of small towns, where wind drift calculation was vital. And when winter came, they moved inside to the sandboxes that sat at the feet of pot-belly stoves.

Tighe made his contribution to the field in 1953, when he managed Buffalo of the International League. He was the central figure in a rather celebrated minor league spitting case.

Actually, it wasn't spitting at all, as Tighe had claimed all along, and as he later proved at great character risk. An umpire named Max Fellerski claimed that Tighe had flown into such a rage during a debate about a baseball matter on the field he had spat upon him.

This could have been serious. It could have sidetracked Tighe for some time and he might never have become manager of the Tigers.

He Could Not Tell a Lie

"I asked to take a lie detector test," Tighe told me last spring at Lakeland. "I knew I hadn't spit on the fellow. He was so excited I doubted that he knew what had happened. Maybe it looked like I was taking a chance, but I never felt that I was."

"They took me down to police headquarters in Buffalo and they strapped all this equipment on me. I'll admit I did get a little jumpy then. They put me into the chair just like a criminal and gave me the regular treatment. It was pretty important to me. If I passed it, I was exonerated. If I didn't, I'd probably have been out of baseball for a while."

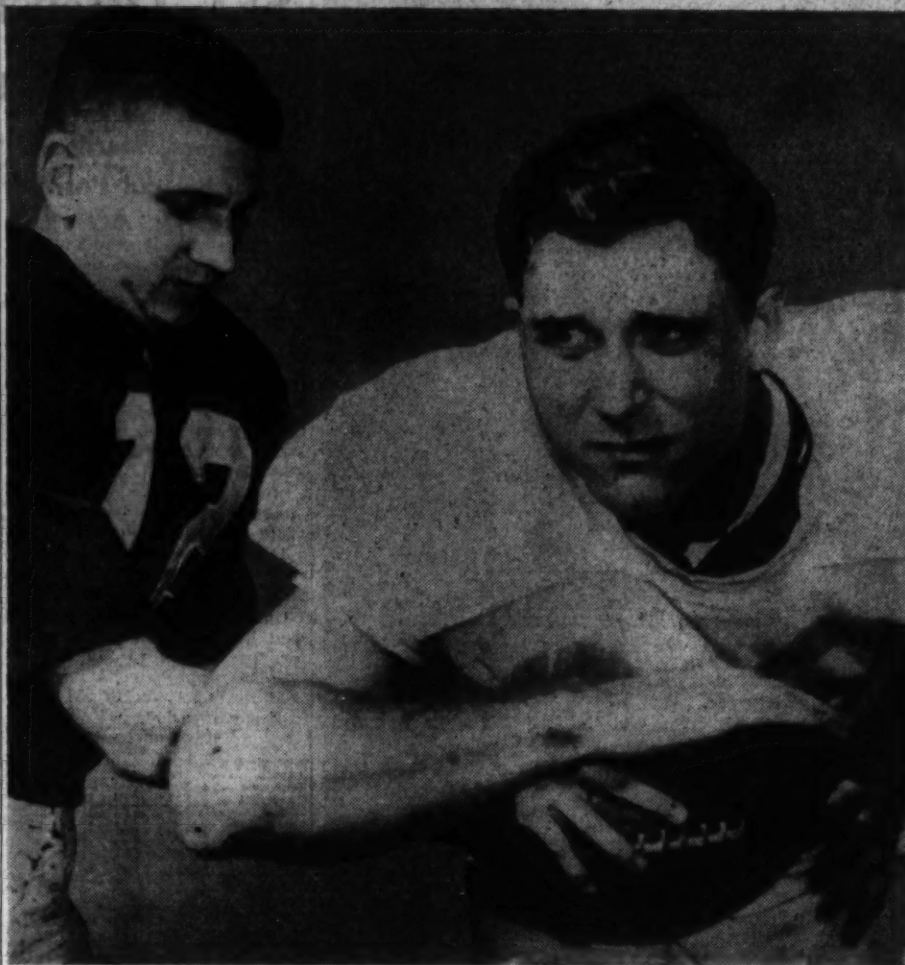

"I watched that little needle and I knew I was safe. I passed the test and I went back to managing my team. The umpire quit right after that and I think he's managing the Buffalo stadium now."

First time I ever saw Tighe in action he was managing one of the weakest minor league clubs I ever saw at Winston-Salem, N.C., in 1942. He had Vic Wertz in his outfield, Neil Berry at shortstop and Bobby Hogue, Ted Gray and Joe Mocer, a fine prospect later killed in the war, among his pitchers.

But his kids couldn't hit a lick and neither could they field. They wound up eighth in the league on offense, seventh on defense and eighth in the standings, and Tighe, whose stomach couldn't stand it, wound up in a hospital.

His first baseman, by the way, was a bright young man just out of Notre Dame named Johnny McHale. This is another one of those cases in which is demonstrated the proper reward for kindness applied to all young men on the way up.

Johnny McHale today is farm director for the Detroit Tigers, now Tigers.

'GREATEST SINCE ISAAC'

Greenie Newton's Big Experiment: Football Biggies Can Come Down

Special to The Constitution

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 23— "The greatest Newton since Isaac," at least in the minds of Tulane football faithful is busily rediscovering some of the major physical laws.

That which went up (Ole Miss) came down (10-3) last week at Jackson, Miss., with the chief gravitational force being Tulane quarterback Thomas Eugene Newton.

Newton will hold forth on the subject again Saturday afternoon in a special seminar at the Georgia Institute of Technology. If his experiment should work more, New Orleans will no doubt move ahead of Sir Isaac in the weekly ratings.

Tulane's good little man, at 160 pounds a candidate for college football's middleweight championship, understands the gravity of directing the Greenies against such a formidable opponent as Tech. So does head coach and Andy Pilney and all his hands.

"Georgia Tech undoubtedly has one of the best teams our conference has ever seen," says Pilney. "We know we can't waste any time on the pink cloud that Ole Miss win briefly put us on."

Tulane will not be without resources of its own despite the fact that Tech is a bona fide two-touchdown favorite.

Starting with their visit to Athens last Oct. 22, the Greenies have won seven games, tied one and lost only two of their last 10. Victories over Georgia (14-0) and Auburn (27-13) last fall and Navy (21-6) and Ole Miss (10-3) in the last two weeks were considered upsets.

The glowing current record of 4-1 also includes decisions over Northwestern (20-13) and Virginia Tech (21-14) and a 7-6 loss to Texas that is not easy to explain in the light of recent events. Conference Coaches have voted Tulane "team of the week" for the past two Saturdays.

Quarterback Gene Newton, the exceptionally-poised Shreveport, La., junior, has been the principal individual reason for this success. He has had a hand in all 11 Tulane touchdowns to date, running for two (10 yards against Northwestern) and that breath-taking 86 yards against Ole Miss, passing for five and handing off for four.

Newton has accumulated 428 yards in total offense over the first half of the schedule.

Also still very much in business is fullback Ronnie Quillian all-SEC selection by vote of the conference's players last season. The rawboned 190-pounder has been hampered by an ankle injury for the past three games, but has managed to bang out 322 yards and three touchdowns to date.

Quillian should be close to top condition for the Tech tussle as should almost all of the Greenies.

Coach Pilney does have a troublesome injury problem at right halfback, regular Virgil Jester has a pulled leg muscle that probably will keep him out of action Saturday and his top understudy sophomore Claude (Boo) Mason has a hurt shoulder. That may leave the bulk

Greenies, Jackets Use Same Success Recipe

Rely on Speed And Alertness

By JESSE OUTLAW

When Coach Bobby Dodd opened the Georgia Tech workshop to prepare for the upcoming homecoming game with Tulane, movies of the Greenies in action reminded him of another team.

It took only a few seconds for Dodd to note that the Greenies' style of play bears a striking resemblance to Georgia Tech.

"They're probably more like Tech than any team on our schedule," Dodd said Tuesday as he conducted the Jackets through a brisk practice session. "They have fine team speed, capitalize on opponents' mistakes and don't make too many of their own."

Dodd thinks that Gene Newton may be the finest quarterback the Jackets will face this season, and he has a lot of respect for fullback Ronnie Quillian.

"That Quillian is a surprising runner," Dodd said, as he runs straight up, but before you know it he's by you."

Though Tulane's stunning triumph over Ole Miss made a deep impression on the Jacket squad, it didn't shock Dodd too much. He pegged the Greenies "one of the toughest teams we'll face" right after they upended Navy.

The Tech staff has ample reason to respect Newton. In rolling up a 4-1 record, Tulane has scored 11 touchdowns, and the mighty quarterback has had a hand in every point. He has pitched for 190 yards and rushed for 238 more, an amazing figure for a quarterback. Playmate Quillian has been the conference's busiest rusher, hauling 79 times for 322 yards.

Tulane's ability to control the ball has resulted in a staggering rushing total of 1,341 yards in five games, compared to 840 for Tech in four. The Greenies have traveled only 211 yards through the air, but five touchdown strikes by Newton are included.

At the payoff window, however, the Jackets have knocked more frequently. They have outscored four foes, 90-27, while Tulane holds a 78-43 advantage in five outings.

Tulane's air defense has been vulnerable thus far, yielding 417 yards, despite the fact that the Ole Miss game was a mud battle.

Ailing Volkert Ready To Play

So Tech may come out throwing again, especially if the Tulane ground crew proves as tough as the Jacket coaches expect.

Tech is a stout two touchdown favorite, largely because of superior depth, particularly in the backfield. But Tulane is a vastly improved team over the outfit that Tech routed 28-0 in their last meeting in 1954. Paul Rotenberry, who scooted 47 yards for a touchdown, is the lone Jacket back around who visited the Tulane end zone that day.

AUBURN, Ala., Oct. 23— It looked like old times in Auburn's starting backfield Monday afternoon and bad times for Houston Saturday as Bobby Hoppe greeted his switch from No. 2 left halfback to No. 1 right half with a dazzling offensive and defensive demonstration.

Junior Hoppe, who has alternated with sophomore Tommy Lorino on the port side this season, will start on the right against the Cougars, Coach Shug Jordan disclosed after a revved-up Drake Field workout.

With Hoppe returning to the position of his injury-ridden sophomore season, Louis Preis was promoted to the spot behind Lorino.

Preis, a Waterproof, La., speedster, was redshirted last fall and was hurt early this campaign. He transfers from sub right halfback to reserve left half, a role he filled in spring training.

Jimmy Laster of Covington, Ga., is the next in the left halfback chain of command.

Soph Lloyd Nix, who opened at right half against Kentucky and Georgia Tech, stands ready to spell Hoppe, as do Billy Kitchens of Macon, Ga., and Pat Mesher.

"We are moving Hoppe back to his sophomore position for two big reasons," Jordan said. "We need more speed and Hoppe's defensive ability in our starting backfield."

Bobby Hoppe Tommy Lorino

half, his old high school position, during spring training when it was feared Lorino might not be ready for starting service as a sophomore.

After a wobbly debut against Tennessee, Lorino proved in the rugged Kentucky and Georgia Tech scraps that he's ready to cut the mustard in a veterans' league. Hoppe, meanwhile, has developed into an all-around football player of strictly first-string caliber.

The "Chattanooga Choo-Choo," who threatens to go all the way every time but who's been deprived of that "daylight" so far, has added excellent blocking and defending to his superior ball-toting.

Hoppe's defensive exploits against Kentucky and Georgia Tech place him among the SEC's leading secondary operatives in defensive coach Hal Herring's book.

During Tuesday's drill, Bobby worked well at both sidebacks and safety. He also successfully shifted between safety and side-back against the Jackets. Lorino has averaged 9.8 yards in carrying 30 times for 294 yards, fourth-best SEC rushing total. His 40.9 booting average puts Tommy 11th in the nation. Hoppe is No. 5 Auburn rusher with 20 tries producing 91 yards and a 4.5 average.

Junior quarterback Jimmy Cook still limps slightly but got into the thick of the scrimmage. Sophs Frank Riley and Mac Champion may see lots reserve QB duty Saturday.

Senior quarterback Howell Tubbs was limited to sweat clothes and place-kicking. Plenty of head-on tackling, probably precipitated by Johnny Menger's two long runs, was in order for the varsity.

Georgia, Kentucky An 'Even, If' Game

Bulldogs Must Equal Play Against Miami, Butts Says

By AL THOMY

ATHENS, Oct. 23—No matter what the figurin' phils come up with, the University of Georgia's homecoming date with Kentucky here Saturday afternoon is rated an "even if" game by the brass on Ag Hill.

Before he sent his Bulldogs through a Tuesday session designed to test their physical fitness, Coach Wally Butts paused to discuss the Wildcats.

"From our scout reports and pictures, we know that Kentucky is as good on the line of scrimmage as any team we'll meet this year," said Butts. "Their backs are the big, rough type. So far they haven't broken away for any real long runs, but they've played five tough conference games."

"We are also concerned about their passing game. They didn't throw much until last week, but they showed then they could pass. We expect them to throw Saturday. Defensively, no one has gained much on them running, not even Ole Miss and Tech. Their size in the backfield—one is under 187—helps them defensively."

The game, as Butts sees it, is even "if we turn in the same type game we played against Miami." From assistant Coach Jim Whaley's scouting report and other data, the two teams may be compared thusly:

Ends—Little to choose between Kentucky's Roger Pack, Al Zampino, John Cornelius, Jim Urbanik and Georgia's Roy Wilkins, Leland Roberts, Ken Cooper, Angelo Monti and Bill Watkins. Even here.

Tackles—Edge goes to Wildcats' tremendous pair of Lou Michaels and J. T. Frankenberg, although Bulldogs potent with Riley Gunnels, Pud Mosteller, Mike Meatheringham and John Luck. One Bulldog follower said: "The difference is Michaels and Frankenberg get more publicity." But the vote must lean to the "Cats."

Guards—Play of Tony Cushman and Mike Anderson and Wayne Dye in Miami game certainly ranks them as effective as

Florida, Auburn Bulldog Sellouts

ATHENS, Oct. 23—The University of Georgia's games with Florida at Jacksonville and Auburn at Columbus are sellouts as far as Bulldog ticket allotments are concerned. It was announced here Tuesday by Howell T. Hollis, business manager.

Only seats in the temporary stands remain for the Georgia Tech game, he disclosed.

Bob Collier 210, and Archie Powers 210, but the Kentucky team has the weight advantage, especially with Dye (185) in the game. Slight edge to Bulldogs.

Center—All Kentucky here with blockbusting Dave Kuhn in charge of middle defense. Bulldogs hurting with Jimmy Brown injured, and only Harold Deen Cook available.

Quarterback—Billy Hearn of Bulldogs and Kenny Robertson, both young QBs who broke into the lineup after the season got under way. Both find weaknesses in passing game. Wildcats have more depth with veteran Delmar Hughes behind Robertson. No experience behind Hearn with Joe Comfort possibly out for the season with an injury. Starters even.

Halfbacks—Wildcats have size in Bob Cravens, Don Netoskie, Billy Mitchell and Woody Herzog. They carry much more power than Georgia's J.B. Davis, Jimmy Orr, Carl Manning and George Whitton. Bulldogs trickier, though, especially on punt returns. Even here.

Fullback—Massive Bob Dougherty of Kentucky one of team's best defenders. He teams with Kuhn to present a solid middle block for opponents. Georgia's Wilbur Lofton considered faster and better offensive fullback. Knox Culpepper gives Bulldogs depth here, and Cliff Tribble is dependable second liner for 'Cats. Not much to choose between teams at FB.

THE NOTEBOOK: Al Bishop, who has missed two games due to injuries, was back in pads for the heavy session Tuesday. He was running well from halfback.

Center Jimmy Brown, another hospital case, reported his ankle "much better" and predicted he'll see action against Kentucky. . . . Sports publicist Dan Magill was busy selling tickets for the "Red Patterson Dinner" Wednesday night, honoring Georgia's Olympic swim ace.

The Kentucky game will be well aired. Four Kentucky radio stations, one Georgia network and CBS plan coverage. . . . Co-captains Knox Culpepper and Leland Roberts have nice wall pieces, with their names engraved, presented them by Miami Captain Don Besseler after last week's game. . . . Tuesday's practice was a snappy session that pleased the coaches.

Mich. State Leader in Grid Polls

Oklahoma's reign over the collegiate football scene came to an end last week. The Sooners dropped to the No. 2 spot behind Michigan State after the Spartans had a rousing 47-14 afternoon with Notre Dame.

In the Associated Press poll, Michigan State received 96 first place votes for an accumulation of 1,459 points to Oklahoma's 356. The United Press scored it 332 for Michigan State and 316 for Oklahoma.

Machen 2-1 Over Holman

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 23 (U)—A rising youngster risks his perfect record against a tested veteran here Wednesday night when heavyweight Eddie Machen of Redding, Calif., meets Johnny Holman of Chicago in the week's top boxing match.

Machen, 24, will enter the ring a 2-1 favorite in the scheduled 10-rounder, which will be televised and broadcast nationally (ABC at 9 p.m. EST).

SPARTANS HOPE TO GET SOONERS ON SCHEDULE

EAST LANSING, Mich., Oct. 23 (U)—Michigan State Athletic Director Biggie Munn said Tuesday he would like to schedule a football series with Oklahoma.

Michigan State, just today, nudged Oklahoma out of top place in the Associated Press poll on the strength of its 47-14 defeat of Notre Dame.

Munn said, however, it would be "impossible" to talk about a 10-year contract as one report of the projected series had it. "We're waiting for the Big Ten schedule meeting in December to find out what is decided on the round-robin conference scheduling for 1958 and 1960," Munn said.

"We naturally want to play Notre Dame as an outside opponent and have said so repeatedly. We also would like to play Oklahoma in a home and home series some time in the future if a schedule can be worked out."

Munn said there had been little discussion with Oklahoma authorities on the proposal recently, however. "We also would like to get in a game with the University of Detroit," he added. "But of course our Big Ten scheduling comes first before we can talk solid about any outside opponents."

Still Could Play, Says Phil Rizzuto

Retired Star Likely To Get Baseball TV Job In New York

By JESSE OUTLAW

Three years ago Phil Rizzuto wrote a story for a national magazine: "Don't Tell Me I'm Washed Up."

He told George Weiss, the New York Yankee general manager, the same thing shortly before being shoved into retirement last Aug. 25. He said the same thing again here Tuesday, as he sat in the office of the United American Life Insurance Co., a firm with which he is connected.

"I'd be the last to deny that I haven't slowed down," said Rizzuto, "but I know I can still play good baseball at 38. Look at Luke Appling. He played 142 games in 1949, when he was 40."

Phil Rizzuto, of course, has had several opportunities to play since the Yankees paid him off for his 13th and last season and placed old Enos Slaughter on the roster. But he won't play anymore.

"I never played for any major league team except the Yankees, and I don't intend to," Rizzuto said. "Everything has worked out swell for me, and I'm not bitter anymore."

"I don't mind telling you I was right at first," Rizzuto continued. "I'll always be grateful that I left Mr. Weiss' office at the Stadium and went home the day he told me I was out. If I'd waited around for writers, I'd have said several things I know I'd have regretted later."

"Toughest thing of all was sitting there in the press box during the world series, covering the game for INS. There's nothing like the thrill of playing in a series. I'd been in nine and I wanted to get in just one more."

"I'd often asked DiMaggio and some of the others how it felt to be through, and they'd say there's no way to explain it. Now I know."

"I'm going to miss being with the guys on the team, but I don't think I'll be very far from them. Looks now as though I may get a TV-announcing job with one of the teams in New York."

Rizzuto had offers from other cities, including a fine deal in Baltimore, but it's only natural that he'd prefer to remain in the big town, where he was a big hit from the time he came up from Kansas City to the Stadium in 1941.

He is opening a bowling alley with Yogi Berra in Clinton, N.Y., and is connected with a clothing company, in addition to insurance, TV and other ventures.

Rizzuto is thorough as a player, but he's just starting in business. And it looks as though he'll be

Tigers, Maroons In Second Position

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 23 (U)—Mississippi clings to top place on both offense and defense in the Southeastern Conference.

Auburn pushed Tennessee into third place on offense, despite the Vols' 24-0 victory over Alabama Saturday. Auburn took a 28-7 beating from Georgia Tech.

There were no changes in the first six teams on defense, with Mississippi holding to its lead here, too.

On offense, Mississippi's total of 1,945 yards compares with Auburn's 1,300. Mississippi has averaged 367.4 yards per game. The Tigers' average is 337.5.

On defense, Mississippi has held its opposition to 632 yards for five games to 845 allowed by Mississippi State. Auburn has held its opposition to 858 yards in four games.

From Paris to the SEC

The Dixie Series game between Atlanta and Houston had been rained out a few weeks ago and Dick Butler, enterprising president of the Texas League, and idle baseball writers were sitting around a table in the Houston Press Club. The conversation drifted from baseball to football and Blanton Collier, the Kentucky coach, whose team will be playing Georgia in Athens next Saturday.

Butler is an authority on Collier and football. Before he switched to the baseball scene as assistant to former Commissioner Happy Chandler, Butler served eight seasons under Collier as assistant football and basketball coach at Paris (Ky.) high school.

"You know this Collier has had one of the most unusual coaching careers of any man in the business," Butler was saying. "You've probably heard about the story of how he met Paul Brown at Great Lakes during the war and started a great friendship that led to the Cleveland Browns and eventually back to Kentucky.

Someone hadn't heard the story, so Butler told it.

"Collier was a seaman there at Great Lakes and Brown was the coach of the powerful Navy team. At practice every day, Brown kept seeing this seaman taking notes, and figured he might be an alumnus of Michigan or some of the teams on the Great Lakes schedule.

Outlar

"So one day he sent a member of the shore patrol over to investigate. Blanton explained that he was just a high school coach who wanted to learn all he could about football.

"Brown quickly discovered that Blanton already knew quite a lot about football, so he added him to the Great Lakes staff. When the war was over, Brown formed the Cleveland Browns and Collier became his backfield coach.

—He Coached in the Pool at Bainbridge

"The most unusual thing, though," Butler continued, "is the fact that Collier probably never would have met Brown if it hadn't been for his hearing aid. I don't think the story has ever been printed before, but I don't think Blanton will mind if you use it.

"He's an exceptional swimmer," Butler said, "and was a swimming instructor at the Bainbridge Training Center. Due to a slight hearing defect, Collier worked out signals with the public address announcer, who explained the various strokes Blanton was teaching the trainees.

"One day some of the brass was on hand for a demonstration, and Collier and the announcer got their signals crossed. As a result, Blanton was outfitted with a hearing aid.

"When it came time for Collier to ship out with his group for overseas duty, the hearing aid was spotted, and he was ordered back to shore duty, and later turned up at Great Lakes. I don't believe he's ever worn the hearing aid again, but if he hadn't worn it that day, he probably never would have met Paul Brown.

—A Football Man Who Understands Rupp

"He was more successful in basketball than football at Paris where his teams won six basketball championships," Butler added.

Someone remarked that Kentucky at last has a football coach who can second-guess basketball coach Adolph Rupp.

"No," Butler answered, "Collier isn't the kind of guy who second-guesses anyone, and he doesn't leave much room for folks to second-guess him. He's a real football technician."

That latter statement is verified by a gentleman named Otto Graham, the great quarterback who retired this year and retired the Browns' winning ways with him.

"He is a man in whom I have complete confidence and tremendous respect as one of the finest technical football men in the history of the game," Graham says of Collier. "He is sincere, smart and insists on perfection in his backs. He taught me a great deal about T quarterbacking."

It seems ironic that erratic quarterbacking has been largely responsible for the mediocre showing of the Kentucky team this year. Now, however, Collier seems to have found the right pupil in daring Kenny Robertson.

And, as Dick Butler says, don't ever sell a Blanton Collier-coached team short.

Transcontinental Grid Conference Talked

Compiled From Wire Reports

Negotiations are under way for the formation of a transcontinental football conference featuring eight of the great college teams in the nation, the United Press learned Tuesday.

The conference, to be formed by no later than 1938, would include Army, Navy, Pittsburgh Notre Dame, Oklahoma Southern California, UCLA and the new U. S. Air Force Academy in Colorado.

It would mean withdrawal of UCLA and Southern California from the Pacific Coast Conference and Oklahoma from the Big Seven. But it was learned that Army, Notre Dame and Pitt already have indicated willingness to join the conference—if Navy will join. So far, Navy has turned thumbs down on the proposal.

HOMECOMING DAY FEATURE

Alexander Memorial Dedication Saturday

By PAUL ATKINSON

They'll cut short 10 years of dreaming with one snip of the tape Saturday in dedication ceremonies for the $1,600,000 Alexander Memorial Physical Training Center. Georgia Tech's brand-spanking-new basketball palace becomes an official part of the campus in an 11:30 a.m. highlight of Homecoming ceremonies.

Appropriately, it bears the name of the fellow who dreamed it—the late Tech coach William A. Alexander, who served Tech for 40 years as student, athlete, assistant coach, math teacher, head coach and athletic director.

Tech athletic director Bobby Dodd, once an assistant coach to Alexander and his immediate successor, had this to say Tuesday of "The Old Man":

"I am proud to have known him, to have served under him and to have the opportunity to pass on his principles to the others who will follow me. He was a strong fighter, but an honest, dignified and charming fighter.

"But above all he was a man—the finest I have ever known."

Dodd will deliver the dedicatory remarks. An honored guest will be Mrs. William A. Alexander. The invocation will be given by Dr. Vernon S. Broyles Jr., pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian Church.

There will be three other guests, too. These are Anita Wall, the 1936 Tech homecoming queen just announced Tuesday, and her court, Carol Carpenter and Lorraine Cohen. They won out over a field of 29 entries, one from each campus organization.

Tech's third homecoming queen is a 1936 journalism graduate of Florida State University. But she's a lifetime resident of Atlanta and graduated from Northside High School.

She's a Tech fan, naturally. "But not particularly football," she smiles, "... just a Tech fan."

The arena she and thousands of Tech alumni will see dedicated has a seating capacity of 6,999. Located off the 10th street entrance to the Atlanta Expressway, it will house Radio Station WGST besides various athletic departments.

ALL-SEC TEAM OF WEEK

Menger, Michaels, Cook Join Parade

Two comparatively unsung Saturday heroes and a much-touted pre-season star make their appearance on The Constitution's third all-Southeastern Conference "Team of This Week."

The touted performer selected by The Constitution sports staff for his work in Kentucky's upset victory over LSU is tackle Lou Michaels. The other two lads, who didn't get the pre-season build-up but certainly were of all-SEC caliber this past weekend, are center Harold Deen Cook of Georgia and halfback Johnny Menger of Georgia Tech.

Unlike last week when only one player repeated, this all-star eleven has eight familiar faces, including Ole Miss fullback Paige Cothren, a choice three straight weeks.

Here's a run-down of this week's top eleven:

ENDS: Will Billon of Tulane and Buddy Cruise of Tennessee. Billon started in upset victory over Ole Miss to win selection for the second week in a row. Cruise, a bruising performer against Alabama, made the squad two weeks ago.

TACKLES: Lou Michaels of Kentucky and Emmett Zelenka of Tulane. Michaels' punting and fierce line play was best since his opening-week showing against Georgia Tech, done unfortunately before this team was inaugurated. Zelenka played dandy defensive game, kicked a field goal against Ole Miss to return after week's absence.

GUARDS: Tony Cushmanberry of Georgia and Allen Ecker of Georgia Tech. This duo repeats as a unit, their performances against Miami and Auburn, being tabbed as definite all-SEC caliber by their coaches.

CENTER: Harold Deen Cook of Georgia. Played virtually the entire game and was key man in containing Miami's heralded offense.

QUARTERBACK: Gene Newton of Tulane. Back for second week in row, his generalship, defense and 86-yard TD run helped Greenies shock Ole Miss Rebels.

HALFBACKS: Johnny Menger of Georgia Tech and John Majors of Tennessee. Menger ran 60 yards to set up one touchdown, returned punt 87 for another in breaking Auburn's back for big Tech victory. Majors came off bench where he watched last week's action and flashed his usual starring form with touchdown, running, passing and punting for Vols.

FULLBACK: Paige Cothren of Mississippi. Third week in a row for hard-running, hard-blocking and hard-tackling place-kicker de luxe of the Rebels.—FOX

But He Worries Clemson May Burst This Bubble

By LARRY FOX

South Carolina football coach Warren Giese is mighty proud of his Gamecocks' defense thus far. But, like the man who goes around disarming time bombs and such explosives, he never knows when he's going to get a fatal bang out of his job.

That's South Carolina as it faces the crucial Big Thursday test with Clemson in Columbia.

"I'll be disappointed if there's a lot of scoring in this football game," Giese said from his Round House offices Tuesday afternoon. "Not disappointed if we score a lot, of course, but we think our defense has been pretty good. In our five games, we've scored two shutouts and we lead the Atlantic Coast Conference in total defense."

Then he looked at the other side of the coin, the side with a bang. "But you have to remember that Clemson has a very explosive attack, especially with Joel Wells, their great left halfback. Last year when I was assistant to Jim Tatum at Maryland, Wells ran 50 yards for a touchdown against us, the longest scoring run any back had ever made against a Tatum team there. And Wells is still there running that same play we call the Clemson reverse."

Giese reported that the Gamecocks would be in top shape for their important contest, one that has state conference and Orange Bowl implications. Bobby Barrett, ace junior fullback, has returned to action this week after suffering an incomplete fracture of his leg. Barrett surrendered his first-team job to Don Johnson, a hard-hitting junior from Pennsylvania who starred against Virginia, but will do plenty of duty with the second unit.

Only lineup changes for the young Gamecocks will find sophomore tackle John Kompara moving up from No. 2 on the right to No. 1 on the left and sophomore ends Buddy Mayfield of Atlanta and Bucky Walker taking over with the second unit.

Kompara's promotion puts four sophomores on the starting eleven and the boost to Mayfield and Walker makes 10 second-year men on the second unit.

Veteran sophomores on the starting team have been center Lawton Rogers and halfbacks King Dixon and Alex Hawkins, a real explosive combination.

Hawkins and Dixon are two of the most versatile young backs in the league. Both run, pass and play in bruising fashion on defense. Dixon also punts and Hawkins kicks extra points.

Keynoting the offense, however, has been quarterback Mackie Prickett, the heavy-browed senior.

"Prickett has done a magnificent job, especially as a field general. He has not played the sensational crowd-pleasing game he used to, but he has done a brilliant job of carrying us on many long-scoring drives. He moved us 96 yards against North Carolina, 84 against Duke and six more times for drives of more than 50 yards. He is a lot more consistent this year and I don't think there's a quarterback in the conference to compare with him," Giese raved.

In the line, Giese gave a plug to his seniors, end Buddy Frick, tackles Sam DeLuca and Tony Byers and guard Rick Ericsson.

Wee Willie Hof, who missed the Ole Miss game with bruised ribs, is expected back at left half for Saturday. He will share the assignment with sophomore Rene Lorio, an all-out competitor who has moved into No. 3 place behind Quillian and Newton in the team's rushing figures.

The Greenies figure to stand pat with a veteran first line showing Charlie Mackey (205) and Will Billon (200) at ends. Dalton Truxx (225) and Emmett Zelenka (210) at tackles. Wilbur Troclair (190) and Jim Zimmerle (190) at guards and Don Miller (195) at center.

The 38-man Tulane travel squad will leave for Atlanta by train at 11 p.m. Thursday arriving at 1:30 p.m. Friday. A workout at Grant Field is set for 3:30 p.m.

FOOTBALL IN BRIEF

Netoskie in Harness As Cats Get Ready

Compiled From Wire Reports

Injured halfback Don Netoskie returned to practice Tuesday as Kentucky worked on offense for its Saturday football meeting with Georgia at Athens.

End Roger Pack and guard Archie Powers missed the light session with minor injuries. But both are expected to be ready for Georgia.

OTHER SEC—Florida's Jackie Simpson seems to have shaken a leg injury. Ole Miss counted end Buddy Harbin among its injured. Louisiana State worked on offense while Tennessee got a good going-over on defense for Maryland. But Saturday foes Alabama and Mississippi State both gave the offense a thorough polishing. Wandy gave a sophomore quarterback Boyce Smith a long passing drill.

ACROSS THE NATION—Clemson touched up its passing in its last home drill before Thursday's game with South Carolina. Pittsburgh regained fullback Tom Jenkins, who was sidelined in the Duke game. Notre Dame threw sophomore quarterback Bob Williams into the breach in place of injured Paul Horning. William & Mary end Walt Brodie was named the Southern Conference's Player of the Week. Maryland faces a morale problem, according to coach Tommy Mont.

Oklahoma continued as leader in scoring (45.3 points per game), total offense (459.5 yards per game in four contests) and rushing (396.5 average) among the nation's major college teams.

Ohio State coach Woody Hayes predicted a Buckeye victory over Wisconsin, saying, "It should be a good game but I think we'll win." The Citadel listed tackle Al Baron and fullback Dave Bochniowich as doubtful starters Saturday. North Carolina State had fullback Tony Guerrieri at the No. 1 spot for the first time in several weeks. Davidson moved Dyke Little into the No. 1 quarterback spot. Miami coach Andy Gustafson hurled a tirade of words at his Hurricanes for "sloppy defensive work." Furman continued work on its new single-wing attack with freshman Jim Jennings at tailback. Duke's Charlie Bradshaw was named Player of the Week by South Carolina sports scribes.

Oklahoma continued as leader in scoring (45.3 points per game), total offense (459.5 yards per game in four contests) and rushing (396.5 average) among the nation's major college teams.

Herb Thomas Critically Hurt

SHELBY, N.C., Oct. 23 (UP)—Herb Thomas, veteran Sanford driver, was critically injured here tonight in a seven-car smashup during a 100-mile stock car race won by Buck Baker of Charlotte.

Thomas, the current point leader in the race for the national championship among Grand National Circuit late model stock cars, was taken to a hospital with head injuries. He was reported unconscious.

Roosevelt, Newnan, College Park, Terrell in Big Ten

By CHARLIE ROBERTS

Atlanta Northside, Valdosta, Carrollton, Trion and Monticello continued to hang onto their first places in Classes AAA, AA, A, B and C in The Constitution's weekly ratings of Georgia's high school football teams last week.

In fact, the first five teams held their spots in Classes B and C, the first four in A, the first three in AAA and top two in AA.

Only new teams to gain "Big Ten" rating in one of the divisions were Atlanta Roosevelt, Newnan, College Park, Terrell, Newton County and Dawson and Chattahoochee Valley.

The big game of the week involves the number one and four rated eleven in AAA, Northside whaled tough Bass, 28-7, to retain its first-place spot. West Fulton, Northside's Thursday foe, moved up a notch to fourth with a stunning 33-7 triumph over rugged Grady.

Dalton and Lanier remain second and third after whacking Calhoun, 33-6, and previously unconquered Columbus Jordan, 27-6. Jordan fell from fourth to eighth as Cedartown, Decatur and Richmond Academy moved up a peg each above Jordan by dumping Rossville, 26-0; Athens, 16-0, and Coffee County, 35-6.

Benedictine of Savannah remained ninth after a scoreless tie with tough Columbus, and Roosevelt, which thumped Hapeville, 18-0, took over the tenth spot from Bass.

Valdosta and Thomasville, with 40-13 and 38-7 thrashing of Tifton and Cook High of Adel, retained the one-two AA slots. Druid Hills moved up a peg to third with a 34-0 pasting of Newton County as Rockmart suffered its first defeat, a 20-13 defeat by Newnan, and tumbled six places to ninth. Newnan took eighth place. Avondale raised some eyebrows with a 19-0 blasting of Gainesville and leaped three pegs to fourth. Waycross and Jesup held onto fifth and sixth after belting Fernandina, Fla., 39-14, and Jeff Davis, 41-0. Cairo moved ahead a giant stride to seventh on a 41-7 tanning of Americus, and College Park moved into tenth place after socking Fairburn Campbell, 47-12.

Trion trampled Dallas, 32-0, and held top spot in B ahead of Idle Patterson. Conyers, Morgan County and Blakely-Union again follow in order after tanning Tucker, 20-13; Lawrenceville, 53-6, and Pelham, 63-6. Washington, 35-7 victor over Commerce, moved to sixth ahead of Fort Valley, which got by Manchester, 26-18.

At top's end, the eighth rank was empty! PROOF that in today's modern cars, with properly operating, pressurized cooling systems, "ZERONE" won't boil away under virtually any driving conditions.

Tuesday workout was the running of halfback George Volkert, who has been hampered by a pulled leg muscle since the SMU game. Dodd said that Jimmy Thompson would start, but Volkert is expected to see service against the Greenies.

Injured halfback Stan Flowers and Don Ellis watched the drill in sweat clothes. Ellis definitely won't play Saturday, and Flowers has only a long-shot chance.

Ike Hints Aid to Poles Is Ready

praised the Poles' love of freedom and foresaw Soviet "tyranny" over the satellites collapsing eventually under the weight of unrest, discontent and rioting.

Eisenhower spoke at the diamond jubilee banquet of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

It was his first campaign speech before a labor audience, but he spoke only briefly on the "pocketbook" to them.

The charge is untrue, he said, that he and his administration are "dedicated to furthering the interest of big business."

"If it were true," he added, "I am sure big business would assert we have failed miserably in our alleged mission."

Under his administration, he said, corporate profits have shrunk to a smaller percentage of the national income than during the previous seven years of Democratic control.

And labor's share of the national income, he added, has risen to 70 per cent, "the highest in the last 20 years." From 1946 to 1952 net corporate profits averaged 1.7 per cent of national income, he said. Since 1953, he added, they averaged only 6 per cent.

Then he switched to foreign policy and a discussion of "the fruits of Communistic imperialism now daily becoming evident in the satellite world."

"The day of liberation may be postponed where armed forces for a time make protest suicidal," he said. But all history testifies that the memory of freedom is not erased by the fear of guns, and the love of freedom is more enduring than the power of tyrants.

He set forth four ways in which this country should carry out the "mission as the champion of human freedom."

1. By supplying aid to "freedom-loving peoples" who want and can use it profitably.

2. By maintaining the principle that all nations capable of self-government have the right to "an independent government of their own full free choice."

3. By managing U. S. foreign commerce in "a genuine partnership of trade" to foster a "mutually shared prosperity and abundance" abroad.

4. By exemplifying at home the opportunities and rewards of a system of free government.

In these ways, the President said, "We shall expand the areas in which free men, free governments can flourish."

Adlai Raps Nixon Hand On H-Bomb

the door" on discussion not only at home but also in foreign diplomacy.

The Democratic nominee reiterated his rebuke to Bulgarian for elbowing into an American domestic argument but said this did not excuse Eisenhower's effort to duck debate or his failure to act.

"I reject the idea of throwing up our hands and saying it is no use to try," Stevenson said. "This is one time we can't take 'no' for an answer when the certainties of civilization depend on ultimately finding the right 'yes.'"

RECORD OF MISTRUST

"And, I don't think this nation wants the great decisions about the H-bomb entrusted to Richard M. Nixon . . . and a sober question in this election is whether such fateful decisions can be safely entrusted to Republican Party leadership, with its record of isolationism, rigidity and mistrust of the people."

Stevenson said that at the heart of the argument about the hydrogen bomb lay two questions:

"Will the peace and health of the world be advanced if all nations stop exploding hydrogen weapons? The answer is 'yes.'"

"Would such an agreement weaken the relative military position of the United States? The answer is 'no.'"

NUCLEAR CAPACITY

Stevenson said America's nuclear capacity for destruction already "defies description."

"Our arsenal of hydrogen weapons is enough to deface the earth," he said. "Our stockpile continues to grow. By entering such an agreement, we lose none of our power. We gain peace power."

Stevenson declared "the transcending question before humanity is whether there will be any tomorrow at all."

Stevenson backed his proposals for Poland with a pledge of personal support for "responsible action on the part of our government which will help move Poland and the indomitable Polish people closer to freedom."

"WE MUST HELP"

Stevenson said "we must help the Poles if we can."

He proposed that "if Soviet pressure continues and the Polish government wishes it," the case be brought before the United Nations. He also suggested the United States join with other nations in offering economic assistance "to a free government in Poland."

Stevenson did not make specific whether he regarded the present self-assertive Polish Communist regime as meeting his definition of a "free government."

NEW MIDEAST POLICY

The Democratic nominee made another positive recommendation in the sphere of foreign policy. He called for a new American policy toward the Middle East, which he cited as the area of some of the gravest failures of the Eisenhower administration.

This Middle Eastern policy, he said, should have as its "first premise" recognition that "Israel is here to stay" and support of that nation with the arms, economic aid and diplomatic guarantees necessary to assure her independence and integrity.

But the bulk of Stevenson's address was devoted to attack and criticism of Eisenhower, Nixon and Secretary of State Dulles.

"CULT OF PERSONALITY"

He charged the Republican Party with seeking to establish a "cult of personality" around Eisenhower's name that would make him immune to criticism. The phrase "cult of personality" is the euphemism employed in the Soviet to describe the idolatrous worship that grew up around the late Josef Stalin.

Stevenson asserted that the Republicans had hoped to stifle debate of national issues by smothering them in a "blanket of warm, wet fog" in which the President and his actions would be held sacrosanct.

"But in a free democracy there is no place for the notion that the President can do no wrong," Stevenson said. "And we reject, too, the new notion that the President is somehow not responsible for the deeds of his government."

Shartzer, the Republican state chairman, and Robert R. Snodgrass, GOP national committee chairman and state finance chairman, said they have violated no law and scoffed at Hamilton's accusations as Democratic "propaganda." So did Tom Hays, GOP public relations director.

"It is not a violation of the Hatch Act to solicit funds from federal employees," Snodgrass said, "and we have not violated the Hatch Act."

"ACTIVELY ENGAGED"

"I am actively engaged in raising funds to bring about the reelection of Dwight D. Eisenhower, and I am proud of it and I am not violating the law. I am ardently proud that I am raising funds for Eisenhower's reelection. I am a good citizen and I am not desirous of breaking the law and have not broken it."

Shartzer said it is not a violation of the Hatch Act for federal employees to make contributions to a political campaign or to attend fund-raising dinners.

Shartzer and Hays said the GOP committee has sent thousands of letters inviting Georgians to contribute to the Republican cause and to attend the Summerfield dinner.

ence in each other's internal affairs.

Police were not visible near the square but five trucks of soldiers who rushed to the area around the broadcast station fraternized with the demonstrators.

A delegation of demonstrators got into the radio station and was prevented from leaving. The crowd began to surge to the rescue. Uniformed police used tear gas bombs to eject them.

Thousands of students and workers took part in demonstrations during the afternoon, crying, "Out with the Russians!" and, "We want a change in the government."

By night the crowd grew into an unruly group numbering probably 100,000.

Following up afternoon demands that the statue of Stalin be removed from the square because it was a symbol of tyranny, the crowd moved into Stalin Square.

Young workers, who had marched in the afternoon demonstration in oil-stained overalls, brought trucks with mounted winches.

Youths scaled the statue on ropes and fastened cables in its neck. But their work was amateurish. The cable snapped several times.

Then they brought acetylene torches. The colossal statue tottered but did not fall and the workers were still trying to bring it down.

Other youths swarmed over the roof of the trade union building opposite the statue and tore down the red star.

Although they stood in the square shouting, "Down with Geroc" and, "Down with the red star," the demonstrators did not move from their places.

The crowd was still growing late tonight.

"Sure, we won't go home before we finish this business here," said an artillery lieutenant who tried to keep order in the square.

His efforts chiefly were to warn onlookers that it could be dangerous for those near the statue when it tumbled.

Trucks packed with demonstrators careened about, their occupants waving the Hungarian tricolor flag but minus the Russia-style coat of arms imposed by the Communists in past years.

About 8:30 p.m. the demonstrators sent in a youth delegation to the radio headquarters. The purpose was not announced.

Apparently they were prevented from leaving.

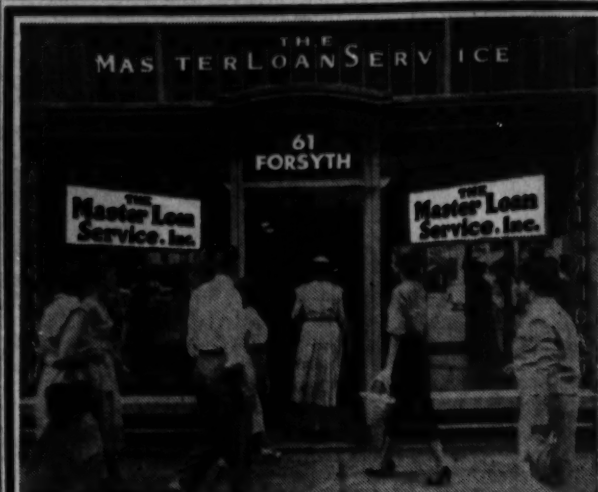

The crowd became impatient and tried to force its way into the building.

Uniformed men of the AVH—secret police—used tear gas bombs to repel them. But the crowd surged back.

Finally, a witness said, the secret policemen used their rifles. One man was shot in the face and killed instantly. Another was wounded seriously.

Acworth Probers Call Police 'Negligent, Lax'

A three-man investigating committee from Acworth City Council scored "laxity in the police department" and reported "evidence of law violations and bad conditions."

City Council voted to continue the suspension of Police Chief Joe Poore pending action at the next Council meeting.

Date of the meeting has not been set.

Chief Poore was suspended Oct. 15 and an investigation ordered into illegal liquor operations here. Earlier, the taxicab license issued to Willie White was revoked after he had paid a fine in connection with charges of possessing and transporting non tax-paid whiskey.

The three-man investigating committee, composed of Chairman C. M. Baldwin, C. K. and J. C. Jolly, Monday night told City Council that "we find the people of Acworth in general have lost confidence in our police department, and we recommend that drastic action be taken to correct the laxity and negligence of the department."

The three members of the Acworth police department—Acting Chief Stacy Hart, James Turner and Holmes Guess—told Council Monday night they had not known of illicit liquor operations here.

The committee report also said Chief Poore had said he knew nothing of the liquor violations claimed. Chief Poore, reported ill, was not present at the Monday night meeting.

Council agreed to continue the investigation.

Andrews was admitted to Emory University Hospital. His condition was listed as "fair."

Patrolman Billy McCullough, driver of the police car, said the truck, driven by Rufus R. Smith, 32, of Scottdale, backed into the road. The police car struck the truck, a panel type, in the rear. The speeder escaped. No charges against Smith were lodged.

Chest Lacks 34 Pct. With 10 Days To Go

Atlanta's Community Chest reached 65.8 per cent of its 1956 goal here Tuesday.

Volunteer workers brought in a total of $1,385,783. They must raise another $719,613 before Nov. 2 to go "over the top" and ensure support of 42 Red Feather agencies in Fulton and DeKalb next year, Chest leaders pointed out.

The campaign to raise $2,105,401 enters "the crucial phase" this week. John Asbel Greene, president of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. and a past president of the Cleveland Community Chest, told workers at a report luncheon that "the last 10 per cent is always the hardest to get."

The City Government Division of the Chest campaign exceeded its quota Tuesday, becoming first to reach its separate goal. Comptroller Earl Landers reported the group has raised $15,000—a figure well above its $11,050 quota.

Greene outlined work of the Chest in his city, which this year is seeking $3,834,000. He declared that success of the Chest drive in any corporation "depends almost entirely on the attitude of the top man." Greene pointed out that aid provided by Red Feather funds is "not a static program with vested interests," but that the Chest-supported agencies offer "constructive, short-term help for persons who, with such help, become self-supporting members of the community."

Leo Alkman, Atlanta Constitution columnist, was in charge of reports at the Tuesday session. Final report luncheon is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. Friday, Nov. 2, at the Biltmore Hotel.

TEACHERS TOUR ATLANTIC STEEL PLANT HERE ON B-E DAY

Educators Get Look at Businesses

About 2,500 Atlanta area teachers visited various business firms here Tuesday, Business-Education Day, to get the "facts" about business operations.

Spokesmen for the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, which began sponsoring B-E Day here in 1950, said the observance this year was "extremely successful." B-E Day is designed to help teachers and business leaders understand each other better.

Teachers from Atlanta and Fulton County white schools visited a total of 128 businesses, ranging from big department stores to small manufacturing companies. While their pupils had a holiday, the teachers toured business plants, heard lectures by company executives and received behind-the-scenes briefings on policies, products and services. They also were entertained at lunch on the firm's premises.

Hill Healan of the Atlanta Chamber said a "great many more" small business firms took part in this year's B-E Day.

Delta and Eastern Air Lines gave their visiting teachers airplane rides over the city.

The Atlanta Journal and Constitution entertained about 125 teachers, who toured the plant and heard talks by executives on production of the two newspapers. Rich's, Inc., was host to a similar group of teachers.

NBC Opera Reveals A New 'Butterfly' Here

By BRUCE GALPHIN

If Atlanta's reception is any gauge, the NBC Opera Company may be embarked on a crusade of major proportions.

For the full house at the Municipal Auditorium Tuesday night—though it did not appear to be a typical opera audience—took "Madam Butterfly" to its heart.

EXCELLENT OVER-ALL

Well it may have! Atlantans may have heard bigger voices with more imposing names singing Butterfly, but it is doubtful that they have ever seen a better over-all production.

This is not to depreciate Tuesday night's singers, for they were in excellent voice. Elaine Malbin in the title role dominated the entire performance, as the book demands. In the first act, her volume was more in line with her petite form, but in the next two she arose to amazing, superb heights.

Davis Cunningham sang a forthright Pinkerton, while Edith Evans sang Suzuki and Mac Morgan as Sharpless added to the luster of the bill.

But it was the NBC company's innovations which spelled the success of the evening. Though seasoned opera-goers may have winced a little when "Un Bel Di" became "Soon will come the day," is cannot be denied that the English translation added considerably to the enjoyment.

GAINS DEPTH

Not only did the story gain depth through the detail afforded by English, but the characterizations also came alive. It helps immensely to know Butterfly is but 15, that Pinkerton longs for an American wife.

Admittedly, the English did not always come through. Perhaps this is impossible in multi-part singing, anyway. But the sensitive baton of Herbert Grossman always assured that the lovely Puccini music carried the meaning at these moments.

Alston Says Youth Must Bear Brunt

The nation must look to its youth for solutions of existing problems, a Southern educator said here Tuesday.

Dr. Wallace M. Alston, president of Agnes Scott College and speaker at the second annual benefit dinner for the Marion Howard School, declared:

"Youth is our only source of hope for the future... no investment pays off in such high dividends as your young people."

"We live in a new era of atomic power. It is to the youth we must turn for solutions in years to come."

"It is easy for us to become preoccupied with problems of our own which can blind our eyes to two great truths in our youth: hope and readiness."

"A reason of hope lived even in the darkest years of world history," he said.

Alston was introduced by Jack Tarver, vice president and general manager of The Constitution and Journal.

Earlier, Miss Marian Howard, who majored in psychology at Agnes Scott despite the handicap of cerebral palsy, thanked the Exchange Club of Atlanta for its support of the school bearing her name. All proceeds of the dinner, sponsored by the Exchange Club, went to further work with brain-injured children at the school, of which Miss Howard is director.

Griffin Says Hard Money Policy Will Defeat GOPs

By KEELER MCCARTNEY

SAVANNAH, Oct. 23—Gov. Griffin Tuesday reaffirmed an opinion that the Democrats will make a clean sweep of the November elections because of a Republican "hard money policy."

Speaking before the 56th annual convention of the Peace Officers Assn. of Georgia, Griffin pointed out millions of Americans are buying homes and farms on credit terms and long term loans.

He said most of these loans represent inflated dollars borrowed for the necessities of life. "It is elemental that these inflated dollars cannot be repaid with hard dollars," he said. "Nor can ordinary trade in real estate, consumer goods or other commodities be carried on at present or higher levels with a 'tight money' policy."

SAYS CREDIT DRIED UP

The high level of prosperity in this country during the last two decades resulted from a plentiful supply of money, low interest rates and liberal credits, he said. He added an abrupt reversal of this policy already has slowed down many lines of business and dried up rural credit.

Griffin reviewed the progress of Georgia in education, including plans for atomic research at Georgia Tech, and the expansion of the state highway system under his administration.

Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook, who spoke before the governor, delivered a blistering attack upon the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, which he termed "the national association for the advancement of the Communist party, according to the record." He pledged, "We shall put the NAACP out of business in January, as other states have done."

EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN

As for the Supreme Court decision declaring segregation in schools unconstitutional, Cook said:

"By far the most potent weapon we can use from here out in our efforts to defend our traditional way of social life is through an educational campaign."

Highlight of the meeting Wednesday will be an address by Senator-nominate Herman Talmadge. The peace officers also will elect the officers and select the convention city for next year.

Georgia Counts 809 Road Deaths

Georgia traffic during the first nine months of 1956 killed 809 persons, the State Patrol reported Tuesday.

The Patrol, in releasing its quarterly activity report, said the number of deaths through September of this year was 55 higher than the total for the first nine months of 1955.

SUCCESS IS WITHIN YOU: Children Like To Look Up to Their Parents

By HOWARD WHITMAN
If we want to be successful with our children perhaps we ought to be a little less preoccupied with ourselves as parents and more interested in them as children. Interest often is overlooked, yet it is one of the healthiest ways in which we let our natural love for our children express itself.

Sometimes a parent becomes understandably weighted down with the concerns of the day, and when he comes home he tries desperately to release some of the love he knows he feels for his children. But as Junior comes into the room the best he can get out is, "Hi, Son, what did you do today?" There is, of course, no crime in this, no grim parental failure, for this father has a deep-down interest in his son and, under pressure at the moment, is valiantly trying to release some of it. Sometimes a little trick can help, and I have a very good one to suggest at a moment just like this. It is like the trick of counting 10 when you feel anger coming on. This one is to pause half a second just before that question, "What did you do today?" is about to come out and instead of asking it at all, make one straight declarative statement of something you yourself did today.

For example, "Hi, Son. Boy, what a noise there was over our office today! A jet plane crashed the sound barrier just above the building."

Or even, "Mr. Allison telephoned me at the office today. He's Jim's dad—you know, just up the road."

GIVE YOURSELF

Interest is not merely a matter of asking questions. If it were, we would regard as most interested in us the people who are actually least interested—those who ask us scores of questions and fill out dull forms for the census, the insurance company, or the local directory. Interest is largely a matter of sharing; when you wish to show your interest in someone you show it better by giving him a little bit of yourself than by asking perfunctory questions.

How bored children must become when grownups, on meeting them, have nothing more to say than, "What grade are you in at school?" or, "How old are you?"

If children had a union they would probably arrange to have cards printed and wear them like pickets' sandwich boards. Little Mary Jane's cards would state, "I am 8 years old. I am in the third grade. Yes, I like school." Then those inquisitive adults would have the answers to the questions they keep asking and asking. I imagine Mary Jane would all but swoon if someday she met an adult who didn't care how old she was or what grade she was in at school—or whether she liked school—but instead said to her, "We have a pet rabbit at home named Cindy, and you know what? She just had eight little rabbits, seven black ones, and one little one that's pure white."

SHOWS MORE INTEREST

The grownup who might say that would, of course, be far more interested in Mary Jane than all the others who pumped her for vital statistics.

But being interested in children does not mean we must abdicate our role as adults. The notion has been put abroad that parents are pretty frightening creatures and if we don't want to make our children neurotic we had better get down off the parental high horse and meet our children, as it is put, "at their own level."

This is a cue to many parents to begin encouraging their children to call them by their first names. So one is treated to the ludicrous spectacle of seeing 7-year-old Martha come sauntering into the living room and saying to her fat and 40-year-old father, harnessed in his shell-rimmed glasses and buried behind the financial pages of his evening paper, "Chuck, dinner's ready."

CHILD NEEDS ADULTS

Today we know that you don't become a better parent by abdicating parenthood. We know, too, that what children need most in their parents are grownups, adults, not just another pair of 7-year-olds.

Children want to look up to their parents as sources of protection, guidance, and love. In our garden at home we have a lily pond, and I shall always remember my own son, Kenny, when he was four years old, looking up at me and saying, as I stood on the edge of the pond, "I don't want you to fall in the pool, Daddy, because you love me."

He didn't say, "because I love you." The important thing to this child, as to any child, was that his parent loved him. By the same token the child wants his parent to be strong and dependable. He even wants him to have authority (though that word has a tang of profanity in the lexicon of some latter-day experts).

The child's portrait of his parents as he would like them to be is constantly revealed in his own pride when he tells the neighbor kids how much his father knows or how skilled his mother is and, too, in the primitive boast, "I'll bet my father can beat your father."

The obvious reason why any child seeks qualities of strength and leadership in his own parents is because with these qualities they can provide a strong, safe home for him.

YOUNGSTERS' VIEWS

In Lincoln Park, Mich., I met with a group of teen-age youngsters and discussed with them their views of their own parents. Some of their remarks were revealing:

"The trouble today is your ma says you can't do something and the next minute she changes her mind and lets you do it," one boy said.

"Gosh, no kid could look up to a father who's got a lot of mush where his backbone should be," another chimed in.

A grinning realist among them added, "If they let us walk all over them, we're going to! Why shouldn't we?"

The only boy who seemed to feel he had something to boast about was the one who said, "Well, you guys aren't talking about my pa. When he says something he means it!"

Talk to children anywhere and you will quickly discover that though they may enjoy wrapping their parents around their little fingers—if they can get away with it—still in their hearts they yearn for parents who are strong and stable. They are the first to condemn parents who are too weak to raise their own offspring.

The poet Khalil Gibran wrote of parents as "the bows from which your children as living arrows are sent forth." And Gibran noted that even as God, the Archer, "loves the arrow that flies so He loves the bow that is stable."

TO OTHER EXTREME

In parental leadership we have swung from one extreme to the other. The former extreme was nominalism—"smother love"—in which the parents hovered over every facet of their children's lives. From this extreme we have swung to the other: parents who refuse to interfere in their children's decision, who insist upon letting them go their own way, who are fanatically devoted to the notion that if they step into their children's lives they will somehow deny them the strength to meet their own problems later on.

This takes the form of parents asking their young children of eight and 10 to make their own decisions about, say, going away to camp. Children don't really want to make such decisions; they prefer a strong parent who can not only make such a decision but take the responsibility for it.

If the decision is forced upon the child and it turns out to be the wrong one, he is woefully ill-equipped to shoulder the burden for his mistake.

MIDDLE GROUND

One mother listened to a child guidance lecturer tell of the great psychological benefits of letting children make their own decisions and decided promptly to put her new knowledge into effect. When her husband took the family out to dinner the following Sunday, she handed a menu to her nine-year-old son and asked, "What would you like?"

She was going to let him make his own decision, by himself, for himself—just as the guidance expert had said. The boy looked at the menu, then looked up and said, "I'd like a chocolate soda."

"But this is dinner," his mother replied. "You can't eat that."

"But, Mother, you asked what I'd like," the boy rejoined quite logically.

Somewhere between the smothering (overcloseness) and the withdrawal from the child's life (overdistance) is the happy middle ground of child raising. Children, like baby robins, must be nudged out of the nest, to be sure, but there is a great danger in pushing them overboard before they are ready to fly and letting them crash to the ground as in holding them in the nest beyond the moment when their wings are ready and thus keeping them fledglings forever.

Florida Highway Toll Seen Curbing Driver's Licenses

TALLAHASSEE, Oct. 23 (AP)—Judges, law enforcement officers and prosecutors agreed today the most effective way to curb Florida's soaring highway death toll is suspension of driver's licenses for minor traffic offenses and more rigid licensing policies.

"People seem to fear more losing their driver's licenses than losing their lives," Gov. LeRoy Collins told a safety conference in the state Senate chamber. "I think we can justify a more severe treatment of violators brought into court."

NEAR 1,000 FATALITIES

The State Department of Public Safety called the meeting of mayors, judges, sheriffs, prosecuting attorneys, patrolmen and other officials to map immediate plans for cracking down on traffic violators. With the state's death toll nearing the 1,000 mark for the year Collins called it "the most perplexing problem confronting our state."

"The immediate problem is stricter enforcement of the laws we have now. They're getting killed out there right now," Collins said.

Almost all agreed that more use should be made of laws for suspension or revocation of driver's licenses for offenses other than drunken driving. Jackson County Judge Robert McCrary and North Miami Police Chief Carl Ingram advocated a new law whereby driver's licenses would be issued annually on the driver's birthday, thus allowing more time for checking his qualifications.

URGE SPEED LIMIT CUT

Leon Circuit Judge W. May Walker and Secretary of State R. A. Gray also urged a reduction in the speed limit.

Lake County Judge Troy Hall argued that talk of tougher sentences in the courts left out the question of jury decisions, and Alachua County Judge H. H. McDonald said that "every judge in Florida is an individual and no two cases are alike."

McDonald, however, urged the Highway Patrol to abolish its policy of issuing warnings to traffic violators. He said violators should be arrested and brought to court to be either cleared or convicted.

UNIFORM SYSTEM

Col. H. N. Kirkman, Highway Patrol commander, urged city officials to send information to the patrol for its files on traffic violators and said "if we could get a uniform system of reporting it would be a far step ahead."

Although the conference took no formal action, Collins urged the officials to arouse public sentiment about the problem and use the suggestions in their own courts and enforcement agencies.

'Shine' Up Here: 15 Gallons Seized On House Roof

Bootlegging reached a new high in Atlanta Tuesday. Officers E. F. McKillop and Harry McColister seized 15 gallons of white lightning on the roof of a house, at 305 Dodge St., NE. The owner was not identified.

Elsewhere, a bootlegger was forced to jettison his cargo when his car broke down in the 1900 block of Hills avenue, NW.

Neighbors told police they saw the driver remove a case of liquor from beneath the hood and throw it over the Hills avenue bridge after the vehicle stalled. Later, they said a truck pushed the car two blocks in an unsuccessful attempt to get it started. The car was then abandoned, police said.

Moody is charged with converting to his own use bank funds totaling approximately $1,700. Odom, released under $1,000 bond, is charged with converting to his own use bank funds totaling $1,477.

Dixie Rise Needs Dreamers, Ward Tells Kiwanians

Look to the future, Dean Judson C. Ward of the Emory University College of Arts and Sciences urged Atlanta Kiwanians Tuesday.

Dean Ward said that the South has a future "beyond the imagination" but he emphasized his belief that imaginative "dreamers" with liberal arts education must lead the South to that future.

He said that specialists in the field of engineering and research will be needed to build the physical needs. But he said that poets, prophets and historians must dream the dreams and give a direction to this rapid development.

The Kiwanians elected Luther Tatum president to succeed Lon D. Duckworth.

Also elected were two vice presidents, Edward G. Hammond and Carl T. Sutherland.

Newly elected directors are Marcus Bartlett, Julian Harrison Jr., Henry Maddox, Kelly Mosley and Paul Weir.

Adlai Fell in Red Mousetrap On H-Bomb, Dewey Charges

PASADENA, Calif., Oct. 23 (AP)—Former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York said today Adlai Stevenson appears to have walked into a "Communist mousetrap" in his proposal for halting H-bomb tests.

Stevenson, Democratic presidential nominee, has said that if elected one of his first orders of business would be to seek world agreement on halting such tests.

Declaring the Russians want the United States to disarm without any proof they themselves were disarming, Dewey said in a prepared address for a Republican rally:

"The very idea that we should abandon everything we are learning in this field and surrender our atomic lead to Communist Russia is the most dangerous proposal ever made by an American in our lifetime."

Dewey accused Stevenson of "sleep-walking," of spreading "political smog," and of waging a "petulant, waspish campaign."

Dewey, twice the Republican presidential nominee in the 1940's, termed President Eisenhower "the most beloved world leader for peace in our time" and hailed Vice President Nixon as "the most active and useful vice president in the history of our country."

"I think you will agree with me," said Dewey, "that we love Dick Nixon for the enemies he has made. If there ever was a loyal, vital, effective member of the Eisenhower team, it is Richard M. Nixon."

Dewey said Nixon has given "new stature and dignity to his office" and that "he and his lovely wife Pat have made friends for America all over the world."

Calling Eisenhower "the greatest president of our time," Dewey asked whether he should be replaced by "a man whose experience shows little qualification for the most powerful office in the world."

"Four years ago Mr. Stevenson made a good impression in this country," Dewey said. "He faced up to his impossible assignment that reasonable and intelligent in a reasonable, intelligent way."

This is the ninth in a series explaining proposed constitutional amendments to appear on the Nov. 6 ballot.

Amendment No. 17 is one of several proposals which have local application but which, through legal technicalities, must receive approval of the state as a whole.

Two of the board members would come from the City of Canton; one would come from the Canton Millitia District outside the city limits, and one each would come from the other four millitia districts.

Talmadge Calls Democratic Leadership South's Best Hope

COLUMBUS, Ga., Oct. 23 (UP)—Sen.-nominee Herman Talmadge tonight said a return of Democratic leadership in Congress is the South's "best hope" of gaining recognition of its viewpoint in national affairs. The former governor told a Muscogee County Democratic rally that a Democratic victory in next month's general election will assure that control of major congressional committees will remain "in the hands of able, conservative men."

He said "neither the candidates nor the platform of the Democratic party entirely suit the people of the South, but they certainly are preferable to what the Republican party has to offer."

Settings Fit for A Queen

By YOLANDE GWIN

Josiah Wedgwood, the only Englishman who ever rated the title of "potter", should have lived to see his wares set to a queen's taste.

His life story ran from 1730 to 1795, but the memory lingers on, especially to those who appreciate rare and ageless tableware.

A hostess with the mostest tableware would probably go wild if she visited the Atlanta Art Galleries this week (and through Nov. 6) and saw 19 settings representing 200 years of Wedgwood tableware.

"IN TODAY'S SETTINGS"

The exhibit, "Timeless Wedgwood in Today's Settings", marks the first time that a museum has attempted through the use of Wedgwood, both old and new, to show that the woman (or the man) who does the entertaining can let imaginations run in every direction proving that individuality and taste permit her to be a law unto herself.

On hand for the exhibit is Henleigh Wedgwood, a member of the sixth generation of the English family, and Mrs. Wedgwood, the duo having come to Atlanta from their home in New York.

At the galleries yesterday Mrs. Wedgwood, who "dressed up" her tailored suit with a handsome Wedgwood blue brooch and bracelet, was wandering around with Atlanta's Mrs. Florence May who designed and coordinated all the arrangements.

A TRADEMARK

Mrs. May said the "it" in her name has become somewhat of a trademark. "The first time I exhibited, the printer made a mistake in the spelling on the program and I liked it so well I have kept it," she said.

But getting back to the exhibit at hand: "Just look at these tables," she said. "They are so original, so unusual, and with the use of Wedgwood blend the old and the new."

For instance, Mrs. May arranged a coronation banquet table using part of Queen Elizabeth's gold-and-white Wedgwood, from the actual set used when the present Queen of England was crowned. There are 1,500 pieces in the collection. Part is in the British Embassy in Washington and part is in England. The table has, through Mrs. May's deft hands and imagination, achieved the appearance of white marble. It is perfection to the smallest detail.

"You might like to see these pieces," said Mrs. Wedgwood as she wandered over to a group of Mrs. May's sectional tables. "This ware, called the Napoleon IV, was made for the Emperor. Also, look at these pieces, which were made for Catherine the Great."

BEAR-BAITING JUGS

One table, shell-shaped, is set with the beautiful moonlight luster. In the collection now on exhibit there are many pieces made by the first Josiah Wedgwood as early as 1750.

There is a nursery table set with two bear-baiting jugs, which Mrs. Wedgwood said were probably the oldest pieces in the collection.

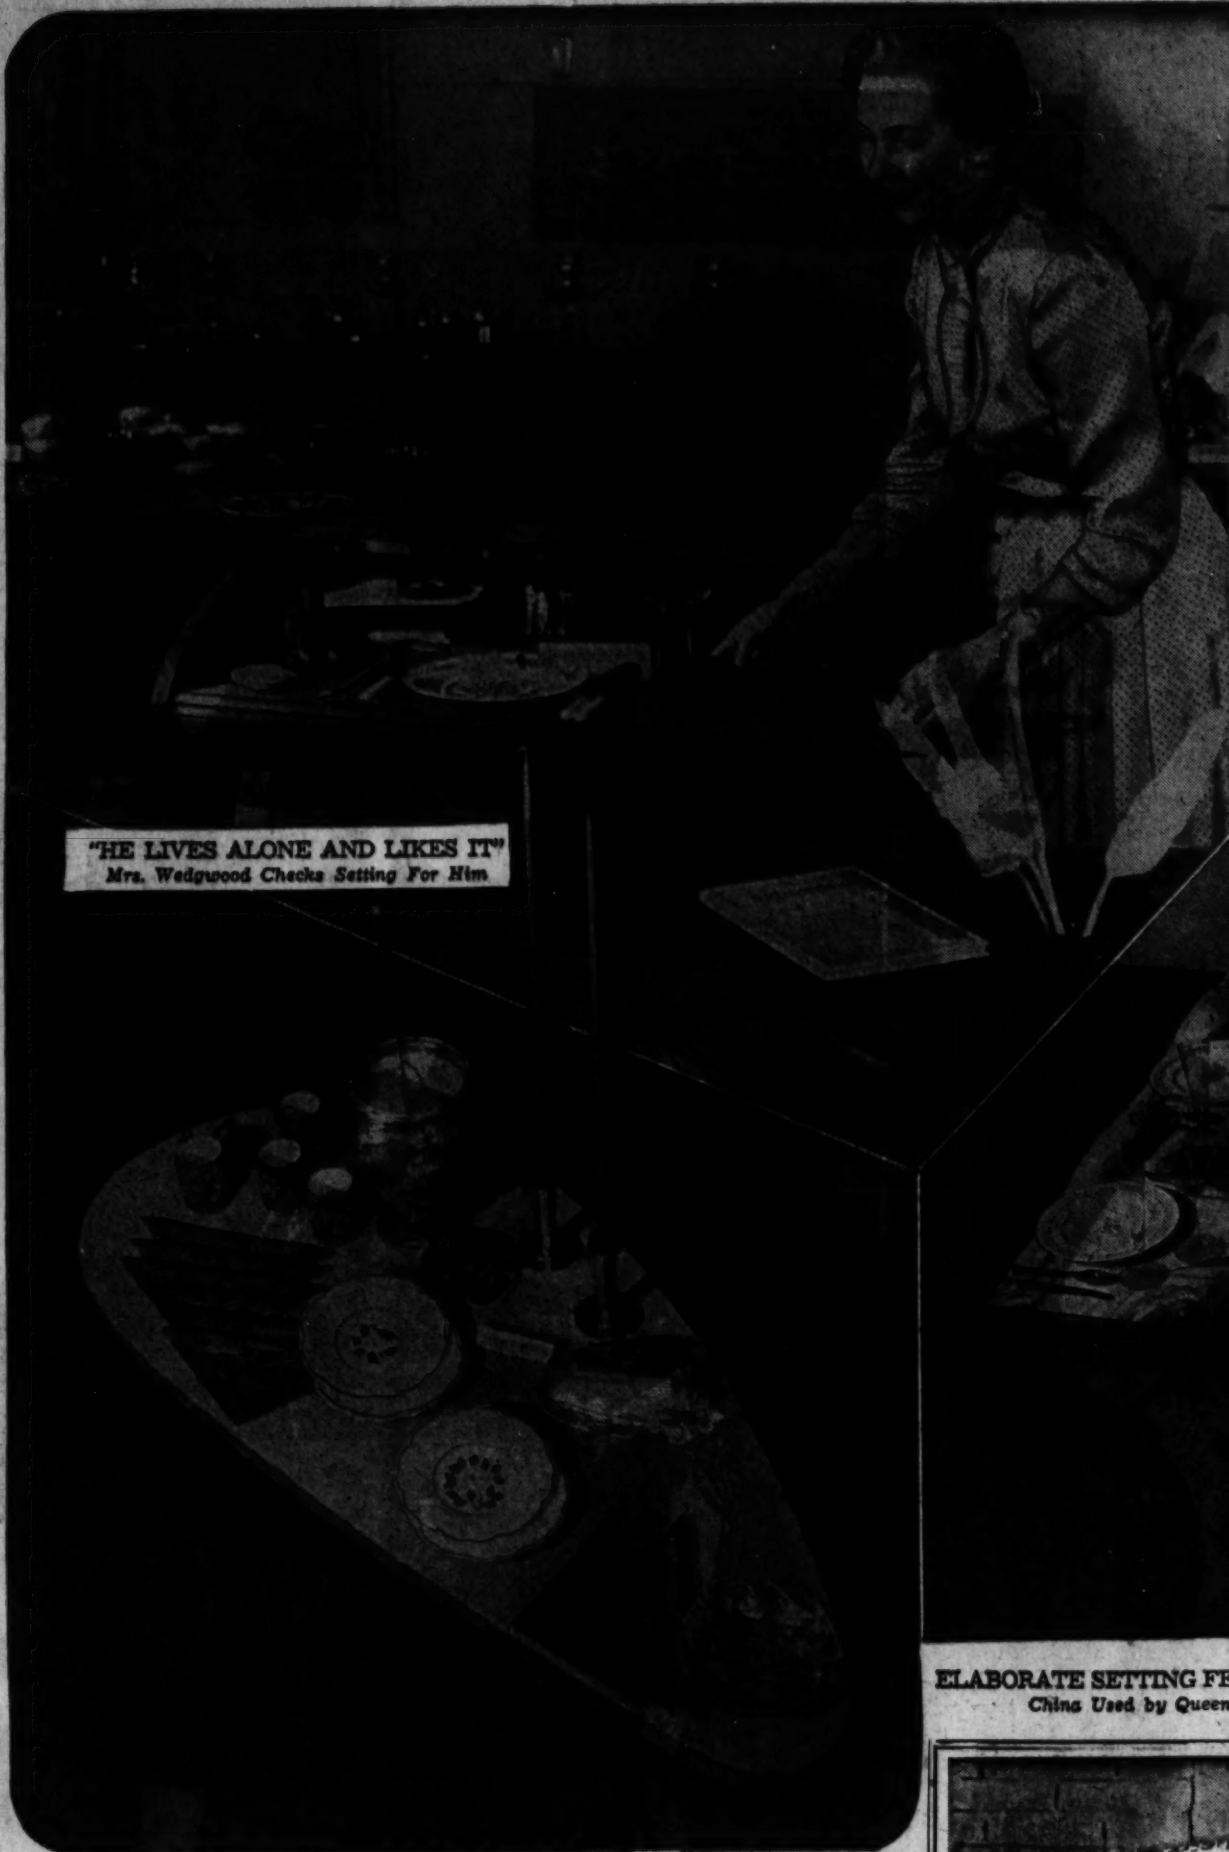

"And look at this," she said, picking up a coffee pot of drab ware. "People today think a drip coffee pot is something new. Here's one made 100 years ago!"

She knows every detail of the collection and can give an authentic talk on any of the pieces.

"The thing that is so unusual and beautiful about all this is that each style, each pattern, can be used by a hostess whether she is entertaining a small group or a party."

A visitor would naturally assume that Mrs. Wedgwood was born within the glare of the famous potteries in England. But she wasn't. She was Anne Reese Smith and came from Pulaski, Tennessee.

And does she have many peo-

Chiffon Blouses With Wool Suits

Dior started the fashion world when he showed chiffon blouses with his wool suits last February. This fall everybody's doing it, both in Paris and America. Usually it's best to buy your chiffon blouse in a color matching your suit. That way it looks like the top of a dress under an ensemble jacket. And of course it ought to be double chiffon to start with. Two layers that is, to give it a semblance of opacity at least.

Personally, I like either the new fichu-collared chiffon blouses, the fichus worn outside the jacket, or pleated chiffon blouses. However, there are adorable chiffon shirts as well.

ple doubt that her name is really Wedgwood?

"Oh, yes," she said. "Lots of people, when introduced, say, 'Well, you have the same name as the pottery people,' or they look at my pin and say, 'Now don't tell me your name is Wedgwood too!'"

Posture Important For Beauty

By IDA JEAN KAIN

It was an eye-opener to watch a junior bathing beauty contest made up of local teenage talent. My, how tall the younger generation has grown!

The girls were judged on beauty, figure and carriage. Youth is always lovely, and these girls had more than their fair share of good looks. All were shapely—there were even several junior Marilyn Monroes. The judging would have been far more difficult except for the third criterion—carriage.

POSTURE-CONSCIOUS

The girls were posture-conscious and tried to stand regally, but some of them just weren't on the beam. In fact, several of the contestants who provided the keenest competition as far as beauty and figure were concerned failed on the posture score. It's significant that the winner and two runners-up carried themselves beautifully.

Analyzed, the leading posture flaw was poor head carriage. Never forget, girls, your style is the way you carry your head! Unless your head is beautifully balanced, the whole line-up is out of kilter.

PLUMB-LINE TEST

You can get the idea quick as a wink if you'll take the plumb-line test. Tack a weighted string to the top of a full length mirror, and stand sideways to the mirror. The string to the top of a full-length mirror should fall exactly this way: Through the lobe of the ear, the tip of the shoulder bone, the center of the thigh, center of the knee, and just slightly in front of the ankle bone.

To correct your head carriage, pull up with that line at the back of your neck. Hold that bump of self-esteem on the top of your head very high, keep your chin level, tipped neither up nor down—that's the way to carry your head like a young princess!

Celestine Sibley Religion and United Nations

This is United Nations Week and at this late date I don't mind admitting that until the other day I was finding it awfully hard to copy up to the occasion.

Admiring something with your mind is one thing. And as an institution the U.N. undoubtedly merits our most impassioned support and allegiance. But what are you going to do with another darned Week?

The Atlanta members of the National Council of Catholic Women have answered that question beautifully. Feeling that the religious beliefs of the people of various lands will ultimately be the thing that will bring us close together, Mrs. George Gunning, international relations chairman, conceived the idea of an exhibit of religious pictures, rosaries, icons and statuary from other countries.

That exhibit is currently on view from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. at the Notre Dame Book Shop at 181 Peachtree St., N.E.

The surprising thing is that Mrs. Gunning and members of her committee were able to get such a beautiful exhibit, representing so many different countries, among friends here in Atlanta.

"We just thought of people we know who have gone abroad and brought back some particularly lovely religious item," Mrs. Gunning said. "They were all extremely generous about lending them and we hope they will bring meaning and warmth to the local observance of United Nations Week."

Mrs. Ernest Felber provided some paintings, a modern Madonna and Child by Antonin Javry Parks and one primitive in the rich blues, golds and scarlets of the pre-Renaissance period. Miss May Haverly lent a handsome silver crucifix from South America and a very old Russian icon.

There is a small hand-carved replica of the famous Brazilian statue, "Christ of the Andes," with out-stretched arms and a head of Christ which was carved from wood in the Garden of Gethsemane and which wears a crown of thorns from a tree in the garden.

There's a missal with silver-bound corners from the Philippines, a tin Madonna from Czechoslovakia, fragments from the Rheims Cathedral, a crucifix from the mosaic factory in the Vatican, a rosary of olive seeds and many other beautiful, colorful objects from Belgium, Denmark, France and Sweden.

The Russian icon was particularly interesting to me. It's hard to believe that communism could get anywhere with people who wrought with loving hands something so beautiful to aid them in their devotions to God.

Mrs. Gunning said the exhibit will be open to the public through Oct. 27. As she quoted officials in her church: "God Himself has made the nations interdependent for full strength and growth and it's not, therefore, a question of creating an international community but a question of organization."

Hal Boyle Named His Daughter For a Tugboat in the East River

By ELIZABETH MORGAN

Hal Boyle, the smiling, affable war-time Pulitzer Prize winner and columnist for the Associated Press, came to town last week.

Mr. Boyle is a delightful person to be around—he's a casual, warm, relaxed sort of man who quietly talks of his life and the doings of other people.

Now he has come to be known as "the poor man's philosopher."

Mr. Boyle spoke at a business luncheon in Atlanta. He chose the subject, "What Northern Women Have That Southern Women Want." His answer is Southern men.

He got the idea on a trip to the Smoky Mountains. While talking to some "pretty Southern girls" (he calls himself a lifelong girl-watcher) he found that they were bitter about the Southern men who go North to find their fortunes. Actually, Mr. Boyle believes, the opposite is true, and Northern women have more reason to be bitter.

He told amusing yarns about his acquaintances, talked about the parallel between the growth of America's prosperity and aspirin consumption, and mentioned our tendency to want security rather than opportunity.

TRACY AND THE TUGBOAT

But privately he talked mostly about his 3-year-old adopted daughter, Tracy. Mr. and Mrs. Boyle spend most of their time with Tracy. The chunky, 45-year-old columnist explained that couples who marry young and start having children right away sometimes resent them. They feel tied down. But, he added, "My wife and I are not deluded by any such ideas. We've waited a long time for a child."

Tracy was named for a tugboat that used to push up and down the East River—a view from the Boyles' first apartment in New York. Mr. Boyle said the boat used to do more work than any other boat on the river; every time he looked out the window there was Tracy going by.

So he called his daughter Tracy, only to find out that the name referred to the third largest tugboat company in New York, and not to an individual tug. But Tracy she remained, and he added with a twinkle that right now she is built like a tugboat.

TO WEST INDIES

She has been on a boat several times, too. The Boyles have taken her on three cruises to the West Indies.

Mr. Boyle went through the North African, Italian and European campaigns as a war correspondent. It was for his stories about the soldiers in these campaigns that he won the Pulitzer Prize, the year before Ernie Pyle won it. He also arrived in Tokyo with U.S.

forces and spent six months in Korea.

He grows sad when he talks about the war. He doesn't like to hunt, he says, because he had enough of guns and killing then.

Mr. Boyle, who calls the world his best, goes abroad every year for column material. He feels that a New York dateline every day gets boring to his readers.

He maintains that a columnist has to fight the temptation to believe his own prose. "Most of the people who write letters to me believe they can write better than I can, and about 75 per cent of them can," he chuckled.

OPERA

When he's away, his wife keeps occupied with Tracy. She has become interested in opera in the past few years, but he still likes popular music—"the pretty stuff."

Mr. Boyle reads a lot, especially newspapers. He likes Emily Dickinson's poetry and some of the best sellers. He has never written a novel himself. "I'd rather talk about it," he said.

A sixth grade teacher started him on his writing career when she praised a theme he wrote. He started as a copy boy for the Associated Press in Kansas City, Mo., and except for college at the University, has worked for AP ever since.

YOUR STARS TODAY

Daily Guide—The next few days hold promise of good feeling and "just a little bit o' luck." Often when people are told they have a fortunate period, they immediately assume that means the heavens will open and shower down upon them all their heart's desires. If one is not working towards a definite goal, nothing big can be expected.

Be grateful if in the next few days you can enjoy and share some little pleasure. Make it come true by planning right now an especially happy day tomorrow when the pattern favors such plans.

Those born in Virgo, especially around the middle of September, have a most fortunate period now; make the best of it. Those born in the middle of May or January can also count on pleasant things at this time.

Happy Birthday, Scorpio! Changes ahead! You may already have had some move or quick changing conditions, but you can expect variation for several years, and since you are fairly "fixed" in your ideas and habits, you might find this disturbing.

You may have begun to feel also some subtle changes in your inner feeling about things, and know the need to choose between the world and your own happiness. A much more creative personality can be developed now, but guard against following beguiling interests which are impractical.

Landscaping, Shrubs On Club Agenda

Lamar Green will speak on "Landscaping and Shrubs" to members of the Candle Light Garden Club and their husbands on Thursday, Oct. 25, at the home of Mrs. Sam N. Roenthal. The assistant hostess will be Mrs. F. R. Bonner. Flower arrangements will be displayed by Mrs. A. R. Chandler and Mrs. R. H. Bohler.

WORMS MAY BE A FAMILY AFFAIR

Fighting, non-picking and a tormenting rectal itch are often tell-tale signs of Pin-Worms or Round Worms... and your parasites that medical experts say infect one out of every three persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Worms, these pests must not only be killed, but killed in the intestines where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's tablets do... ask here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredients go right to work—kill Worms quickly and easily.

Don't take chances with this dangerous, highly contagious condition. At the first sign of Pin-Worms or Round Worms, ask your druggist for Jayne's P-W or R-W... the small, easy-to-take tablets perfected by famous Dr. D. BILLY GRAHAM: Christians Have More Light To Live By

There is nothing to indicate that God did approve of the specific acts of either Abraham or David with respect to their marital relations. What we often overlook is that these men were to a large extent the products of their times. Revelation from God with respect to such matters was a gradual one. Both David and Abraham were sinners, just like you and me. They both needed salvation that God provides through Jesus Christ.

than they did. What might be overlooked in one generation is not approved in a later time, when there is more light. The Bible says, "The time of ignorance therefore God overlooked; but now He commandeth men that they should all everywhere repent."

God did not approve every detail of their conduct. He condemned it and judged it. But God is also a God of mercy, and He dealt with them on the basis of their personal faith and light.

You and I will be held to a standard in keeping with the light

we have. How important then that we are aware of that standard and live by that standard.

The bidding:
 North East South West
 1♣ Pass 1♠ Pass 3♣ Pass
 Pass Pass 3 no trump Pass

Opening lead: Jack of diamonds.
 East exercised an unblocking coup that was as neat as it was rare in order to defeat a game which appeared to be invincible.

South, whose holding was somewhat too strong for an opening bid of one no trump, properly called one spade. Though North held only six points in high cards, we are not inclined to quarrel too severely over his bid of two clubs. We do not expect seven-card suits to conform strictly with all of our standards.

South, holding 19 points in high cards, is in duty bound to make a jump rebid, and three no trump just about fills the bill. But North, having given partner the impression of greater high card strength than he actually held, might have given serious consideration to going on in the minor suit. As will be seen, a game contract in clubs could not be defeated.

West opened the jack of diamonds and East saw at once that the suit was blocked for the defense. True enough, if West had led from a seven-card holding the suit could be established by the play of ace and queen, but East considered it more likely that declarer held at least K x x, in which case South would duck the second lead of that suit, forever eliminating diamonds as a continuing force. South must be induced to take his king of diamonds at once, so East played the queen of diamonds, hoping to be able to discard the ace as clubs were run. It is true that South could have foiled this diabolical defense scheme by refusing the trick, but to do so would be an admission that he had seen an adversary's hand.

Upon taking the diamond, declarer saw that there was nothing to it but to drive out the ace of clubs and pray that the adverse diamond holding was only four cards long.

West refused the king of clubs as partner had hoped he would, but took the second lead. East's moment had arrived, and he triumphantly disposed of the ace of diamonds, permitting West to run five tricks in the suit and chalk up a two-trick set.

"Some skilled workers now earn twice as much as highly successful professional men earned 50 years ago"—Trade news note.

There's little that we really know . . . and yet we like to make a show . . . pretending we are worldly-wise . . . when, like a puppy with its eyes . . . half opened, we just nose around . . . until our proper place is found.

This may be just a semi-truth . . . but we remember, in our youth . . . when jobs were few and times were hard . . . boys labored in a lumber yard . . . or pushed a plow, from sun to sun . . . or anything that could be done . . . productive of a little pay . . . to keep the hungry wolf away.

Not many young men could attend . . . some university and spend . . . the money and the time required . . . and those who could were much admired . . . for football scholarships were rare . . . and papa was no millionaire.

But times have changed and we are glad . . . they have the chance we never had . . . so let them go and let them learn . . . at least enough that they can earn . . . as much as some lad with a trade . . . who finished in the second grade.

Cobb Rapist To Die Nov. 8

Constitution State News Service
MARIETTA, Oct. 23—A 31-year-old Negro convicted three times of raping a white woman near Marietta Tuesday was sentenced to death in the electric chair by Judge James T. Manning of Cobb Superior Court.

Amos Reece was sentenced to die at Georgia State Prison at Reidsville Nov. 8. Reece was convicted three times by Cobb Superior Court juries of the Oct. 20, 1953, rape. He was a trusty convict. The state charged that he left his road grading machine, entered the home of a white woman and raped her.

The U.S. Supreme Court threw out one of the convictions on grounds the jury was not properly selected. The FBI later investigated and disproved charges of irregularities in the county's method of selecting jurors.

Last week, the Georgia Supreme Court turned down an appeal for a fourth trial for Reece.

DRAFT ON HIS NECK

Bring on the Khaki and I'll Have a Ball, Elvis Sings Out

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 23 (AP)—Rock 'n' roll idol Elvis Presley said tonight he had received his draft questionnaire three weeks ago and that he figured Army service was "getting pretty close."

"I haven't heard anything further since the questionnaire, but I guess it's getting pretty close," said Presley.

"When the time comes they can bring on the khaki."

PHONE INTERVIEW

Presley was interviewed over the telephone by United Press at WHBQ Radio, where he was visiting his long-time friend, Dewey Phillips.

The singer confirmed reports that he had received the preliminary papers.

"I got the papers while I was out in Hollywood, shortly before I finished my picture, 'Love Me Tender,'" he said. "The papers came just before I went on my Texas tour—that was about three weeks ago."

HAPPY IN KHAKI

"I honestly don't know what the questionnaire means," he said. "I haven't heard anything since the questionnaire, or about when to report for a physical."

Presley said he would be "just as happy in the Army as anywhere else."

"I'm no different from anyone else," he said. "When they want me, I'm ready. I'll have a ball until they call me and after they call me."

Presley said he "honestly couldn't say" whether the stint in the Army, and being away from show business, would hurt his popularity.

"I'M YOUNG YET"

But, he added, "I'm young yet."

Presley said the questionnaire was mailed to him in California by his local draft board here, Draft Board 86.

Earlier today, the draft board denied that "anybody would know before the board" (that Presley had been drafted, unless the singer decided to enlist).

List Backs Off In Dull Trading

484 Stocks Lower at Bell; Railroads in Sluggish Dip

NEW YORK, Oct. 23 (U)—The stock market declined slightly today in one of the duller of the recent sequence of sluggish sessions. Volume totaled only 1,390,000 shares.

Key stocks kept their gains and losses within the range of a point or so. There was no great pressure on any division.

Preoccupation with the presidential prospects was said by brokers to be the single dominant factor in the market, a condition which has prevailed in recent sessions. A number of analysts felt the present narrow trading range would continue until after election day or until such time in advance when the results seem a certainty.

Except for adding another element of caution, the Polish upheaval seemed to have little impact on trading.

The market was mixed for a short spell in the morning, then assumed its gently lower tone where it remained somnolent.

Associated Press average of 60 stocks dipped 30 cents to $179.30 with industrials down 40 cents, rails down 50 cents and utilities down 10 cents.

Miller of Columbus Heads Georgia AP News Council

The Georgia Associated Press News Council Tuesday elected Dave Miller of the Columbus Enquirer president, planned Nov. 6 election coverage and passed on details for restoring cash awards in the annual newswriting and photo contests.

Miller succeeded Jack Cook of the Savannah Evening Press. He was nominated by Chris Brady of the Augusta Herald, who in turn was chosen vice president.

The council made nominations for successors to three members whose terms expire this year, these to be submitted for approval to the publishers involved. The retiring members are Cook; Bill Ray, Atlanta Journal; and Joe Davis, Valdosta Times.

Restoration of the contest cash prizes was voted at the annual AP meeting in Savannah with details to be worked out by the council and submitted to the publishers for approval. The council recommended a former arrangement which provides a given

It approved coverage of all the proposed constitutional amendments to be voted on in the election along with the presidential race, district and county contests where the Democratic nominees have opposition.

KEEP WELL: Are You Troubled by Fear of Parasites?

By DR. THEO. R. VAN DELLEN

An elderly mother and her spinster daughter went to Charity Hospital in New Orleans because of worms that lived under and emerged periodically from the skin.

Both women were thoroughly convinced that the parasites could be seen and felt. Their skin was covered with sores and scars but neither the dermatologist nor the specialist in tropical medicine on the staff could find a single worm.

When two persons are afflicted with a common delusion, the condition is known as telle ad deux.

The case history of these two patients is reminiscent of the well-known vaudeville gag in which one comedian is scratching himself and brushing off imaginary vermin from his arms. The other member of the team, taking the part of a physician, says, "I know you have lice but don't brush them off on me."

It is unusual for delusions of parasitosis to be shared by two persons. Either one individual imposes the mental aberration on the other, or both develop it simultaneously.

The daughter in this story had spent some time in a mental hospital. She was cautious and admitted she did not trust people.

The initial infection was blamed on a cocker spaniel that belonged to a neighbor. The story was that a parasite from the animal crawled on the daughter and the mother witnessed the event. They were certain the dog was responsible for the infestation.

The physician they consulted was friendly and sympathetic at first but finally told them the whole thing was imaginary.

But mother and daughter were so persistent in their delusion that they went from physician to physician for help. In all, they visited 104, and even consulted a veterinarian.

These women always knew when a worm was about to emerge from the skin because tingling occurred in that area. Hours were spent every night rubbing various ointments and antiseptics on each other's skin.

Their attempts to cut out suspected parts of the skin resulted in hundreds of mutilated, pinched, and excised lesions. Psychiatric care was the only way this pair could be helped, but they refused. By now they probably have visited another 104 physicians plus a veterinarian.
